Labor-Profit Fight May Block Recess In House

Roosevelt, Nelson Ask C. I. O. Yield Some Liberties, Lest We Lose All

Decisive Hours

IT'S TIME for labor to get into the war effort, says Walter Lippmann. Page 11.

Holiday Imperiled

Advocates of war curbs on labor and profits yesterday moved to block an Easter recess by the House as the Senate received a notice of early action on the Connally bill to "freeze" labor relations in strike-bound plants and seize the plants.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt told the C. I. O. conference here yesterday that its workers "dare not do less" than defend their freedoms by uninterrupted war production, and Donald Nelson, production chieftain, appealed to the organization to suspend the double-time pay for Sunday work, now a source of controversy.

To the President's message, the conference responded with a pledge of "herculean efforts" for victory in 1942, and C. I. O. President Philip Murray assured Nelson that resolutions regarding dropping the double-time demand would develop today. (Details on Page 6.)

Thomas Gives Data

In a series of one-minute speeches, House proponents of immediate legislation warned leaders they would oppose the usual spring holidays unless the House first votes on pending profits-labor restrictions.

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, announced he would call up his plant-seizure bill in the Senate immediately after the vote on seating of Senator Langer. The bill would freeze relations in plants taken over because of labor or management holdups.

Charges by President William Green of the A. F. of L. and President Philip Murray of the C. I. O., that public demands for labor legislation were prompted by organized and well-financed campaigns meanwhile were turned over to the Senate Defense Investigating Committee by Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma.

Committee Report Still Awaited

Thomas, whose Appropriations subcommittee held a week of hearings on the case for and against legislation, said he handed Chairman Truman of the Senate Defense Committee complaints covering "both sides" of labor controversies in the war industries. Investigators were reported already at work.

Calls in the House for "no recess until the House has voted" developed a difference over strategy

Western High Wins Cadet Honor For Second Year

With a new understanding of the meaning of the rifles they carried, 1900 blue-uniformed cadets from the Washington high schools competed in annual regimental drill yesterday, and the Fourth Regiment, Western High, took top honors for the second successive year.

Leading it was Lieut. Col. Elmer Gray, 18, blond, blue-eyed and Washington born, of 4528 Fessenden Street Northwest. Gray, in his last year at Western, is trying for a scholarship to Princeton. His plans for a profession are uncertain as yet, he said.

The competition was held in the Central High School Stadium.

The Fifth Regiment of Roosevelt High marched to second place and Wilson's Sixth Regiment to third place. Participating with these were regiments from Eastern, Coolidge, Central and McKinley schools.

Foundation Given Roosevelt Property

New York, March 23 (AP).—President Roosevelt has deeded all his Georgia properties, with the exception of the "Little White House," to the Warm Springs Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, said today.

O'Connor declined to discuss the transaction except to say that the gift included the farm lands with all equipment, livestock and buildings.

William S. Jack, head of a Cleveland, Ohio, airplane parts firm which was "broke" in March, 1941, later the same year drew $145,845 in salary and bonuses and distributed $949,000 to 1300 other officers and employes, including $39,356 to his private secretary, the House Naval Affairs Committee was told yesterday.

The company, Jack & Heintz, Inc., manufactures airplane starters. It has Army and Navy orders totaling $58,000,000 and Committee Counsel Edmund Toland informed the group investigating war profits that all the money distributed by the company "came from the United States Government."

The committee's inquiry is part of current hearing on the Smith bill, which would limit war profits to 6 per cent as well as outlaw the closed shop for the duration, and suspend overtime payments and the 40-hour week.

Toland charged that 14 other companies profited from 25 to 119 per cent on defense contracts. He in-

British Sailor Gets Sympathy In Killing for Slur on Navy

In Philadelphia this morning, Alfred Thompson, 21, a sailor in the royal navy, will face a coroner's inquest into the death of Herman Weigand, a 48-year-old civilian. The charge against the British bluejacket is homicide.

Viewed against the titanic struggle raging in the world, the case of this lone sailor from Britain is a minor thing. However, it has attracted a good deal of attention in Washington — on Capitol Hill, along Constitution Avenue and elsewhere.

Alfred Thompson

The hope was expressed last night that the Philadelphia coroner's jury would ask itself this question: What would a sailor in the United States Navy have done had he been in, say, Liverpool, and been taunted as Seaman Thompson was?

According to Philadelphia detectives, Weigand aroused Thompson by saying: "The British navy is no good . . . British ships are always running away . . . They ought to be out there with our boats, knocking off the Japs."

Thompson, whose warship is being repaired at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, called Weigand on the slur. Weigand swung, and Thompson parried the blow and struck back. Weigand fell and struck his head on the curb. He died a few hours later.

Police sai that when they arrived at the scene Thompson was holding the head of the unconscious Weigand in his arms. Walter Weigand, son of the dead man, told reporters:

"My father's death was entirely accidental and might have happened to anyone. I hold no malice toward the sailor."

Only 500 Soldiers Here Given Weekend Sleeping Quarters

(Churchmen, Government officials, others meet to discuss churches' part in caring for soldiers and new Government employes.—Page 17.)

Only 500 of the approximately 5000 service men who visit Washington each weekend have any certainty of finding sleeping quarters.

October 29, 1941, Hugo Wolter, director of recreational services for the District defense council, announced that the Federal Works Agency had leased the Gunton Building, 306 Ninth Street Northwest, and that the building was to be used as a recreational center for visiting men.

There was available at that time approximately $30,000 allocated by the USO, and $100,000 appropriated by Congress for the rental of the building and the purchase of equipment.

Not until last week, five months after Wolter's announcement, was furniture for the center moved in. Until then, the recreational facilities consisted of folding chairs and old card tables.

During the five-month interval, service men who went to the Center slept on mattresses, or blankets, or sheets.

House Approves Pay Increases For D. C. Police and Firemen

HOUSE APPROVES conference report on District Court merger bill. Page 17.

First Pay Boost in 12 Years

By a recorded vote of 139 to 123 the House late yesterday passed and sent to the Senate a bill authorizing pay increases totaling $750,000 annually for members of the District Metropolitan Police and Fire Departments, the White House Police and U. S. Park Police.

While the measure was discussed on the floor Representative Schulte (Democrat), Indiana, suggested that an increase in real property taxes might be necessary to finance the pay rise. He proposed to increase the District tax on real and personal property assessed at more than $7000 to get the necessary funds.

Representative Schulte, who sponsored the measure, told the House the increases in salaries "are absolutely justified. I know of no other city in the country where the work of policemen and firemen is as hard."

He said that Washington ranks thirty-fifth among other American cities in the salaries it pays its police and firemen; that the local forces have received no raises since 1930; that statistics furnished by the International Association of Fire Fighters show a number of other cities have recently increased sal-

Time Gained

By the United Press

Melbourne (Tuesday), March 24.—Japan's drive to the south has been stalled, in spite of a fierce new offensive, by the loss of 7000 men, 50 ships and 100 airplanes in 59 days of warfare around the islands off north Australia, reports from that sector said today.

Less than 24 hours after Japanese planes had struck the heaviest blow of the war at Port Moresby, a dispatch from that Papuan capital, on New Guinea Island, said the Japanese land drive in that direction had broken down and that the invaders had reached "a more complete stalemate than they have encountered in any other war zone in the Pacific war."

The Japanese lost 7000 men, by the admission of their own radio broadcasts, in landing an invasion force on Rabaul, capital of New Britain Island, early in January. Since then their losses have mounted to at least 50 ships and 100 airplanes under the incessant battering of Allied air and naval units.

Since landing at Rabaul, the Japanese have captured only one town on New Britain—Gasmata—and they have not been able to extend their hold on New Guinea beyond the beachheads at Lae and Salamaua, except for a slight advance into Markham Valley, the Port Moresby dispatch said.

The Japanese air offensive, however, has lost none of its force.

Nineteen Japanese heavy bombers and a squadron of fighters yesterday raided Port Moresby, 350 miles across Torres Strait from Cape York, but a communique said they caused little damage and no casualties.

The communique said the Japanese dropped 60 to 70 bombs, apparently concentrating on the airdrome in an effort to make it useless as an Allied base.

The bombers struck in two waves, strewing many high explosive and fragmentation bombs through the area of military objectives, mainly harbor installations.

Fighters Sweep In

Then the fighters swept in through the defense fire, dipping to an altitude of 200 feet with machine guns and cannon blazing. They paid dearly for the lightning blow.

One swerved sharply and crashed into a hill, bounced 30 yards and blew to bits. The fragments showered over an area of several acres and the pilot's body catapulted more than 300 feet.

A second fighter was seen diving behind a hill with smoke pouring from its tail. Another was known to have been hit.

For the first time "unidentified" single planes, presumably Japanese on reconnaissance, appeared Sunday and Monday over Townsville, on the east coast 700 miles north of Brisbane.

Financial Cupboard Left Bare in Manila For Japanese, Sayre Says on Arrival Here

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Contents of the American and Philippine Commonwealth treasuries in Manila—securities valued in "huge figures"—have been safely transferred to the United States, Francis B. Sayre, American High Commissioner to the islands, disclosed yesterday.

"Back in a different world" after three months under fire on Corregidor and a hazardous trip home, Sayre told how he had "left the cupboard bare" for the invading Japanese by successfully removing negotiable securities to the United States and destroying all currency.

The American high commissioner drew a graphic picture of life on Bataan and in the Manila Bay forts, and presented the first detailed information of the fate and living conditions among some 1500 to 2000 Americans and British left in the Philippine capital.

According to information he was able to obtain indirectly from Manila, American and British civilians have been concentrated at Santo Tomas University, where they are

3 Cargo Craft Sunk; Warship, Two Freighters Are Damaged

Prowling deep into Japanese home waters, American submarines have torpedoed six more enemy vessels—one a warship—the Navy announced last night.

Three of the ships—a tanker and two freighters—were sent to the bottom, two other freighters were damaged, and a warship described as either a destroyer or antisubmarine vessel was "probably sunk."

Toll Is Now 183

The communique brought the toll of Japanese warships and merchant shipping taken by American Army and Navy forces to 183 vessels. Thirty-five combatant ships were reported sunk or believed sunk, plus 10 more damaged, while 62 noncombatant craft were listed as "sunk" or "believed sunk" and 11 as damaged. In addition, the United States Army has sunk or damaged 65 Japanese ships.

These figures are exclusive of Jap losses resulting from Dutch, British and Australian action, although Australian air forces participated in one United States action in which the toll taken by each nation's planes was not listed separately.

Twelve enemy ships have been definitely reported as sunk in Japanese home waters. The three so listed last night were a 7000-ton tanker, a 5000-ton freighter and another 6000-ton merchant vessel. The two damaged ships were 2000-tonners.

This news of further American successes at sea came as American and Philippine troops fighting under Lieut. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright sent a message to Gen. Douglas MacArthur pledging to fight on with the same zeal shown under his personal command.

All Quiet on Bataan

There was a lull on Bataan Peninsula and at the Manila Bay forts after two days of Japanese attacks which indicated that another full-dress offensive was about to be launched.

Gen. Wainwright made no further reports of the sharp patrol action and artillery bombardment that had accompanied a Japanese ultimatum to surrender. Evidently the enemy made no resumption of the attacks when his demand was ignored.

The one War Department communique of the day made no mention of fighting in the Philippines, telling only of the message sent to MacArthur and of air action over New Guinea.

The message to MacArthur congratulated him on his safe arrival in Australia and assumption of supreme command in the Southwest Pacific. It expressed the confidence of the troops in the Philippines that under MacArthur's leadership the United Nations forces "would

Air Struggle Rages

By the United Press

Chungking, March 23.—The first pitched battle for central Burma broke out today between Sino-British and Japanese troops 35 miles south of Toungoo, on the Rangoon-Mandalay road, closely following a blistering Japanese air offensive in which flights of 80 to 100 planes were hurled at the main Allied airport in that area.

American and British fighter pilots, hampered by lack of bomber support, battled fiercely to prevent the Japanese from gaining mastery of the skies. It was revealed that 12 Jap planes were destroyed in a smashing R. A. F. raid on the Mingaladon airdrome north of Rangoon, in a raid on Saturday, and that two, and possibly five more Jap fighters were destroyed in a raid there Sunday.

One Allied Fighter Lost

A New Delhi communique describing the Saturday raid said:

"When enemy fighters attacked our bombers, one went crashing down in flames and another blew up in the air. Our bombers probably destroyed two more enemy planes. Our fighters went into action and shot down five more of the enemy. Then they machine-gunned the airdrome and smashed one bomber and two fighters on the ground. Several more were damaged. One of our fighters crashed,

Bloc Maps Liquidation Of CCC, NYA

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Members of the Senate "economy bloc" last night were reported to be considering means of liquidating the National Youth Administration and the Civilian Conservation Corps in the face of opposition from Administration leaders and in the Senate Education and Labor Committee.

At the same time, Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, who is sponsoring a measure for abolition of the agencies, yesterday offered an amendment which would preserve the NYA's program of training young men for work in war factories by transfer of its "supplies, tools and equipment" to the Office of Education of the program under the education agency.

In Line With Post Editorial

The amendment is in line with a suggestion in an editorial in The Washington Post of February 12, which, calling for greater conversion of the Government for war work, said among other things:

"The National Youth Administration is absolutely superfluous. Transfer the youth defense training feature to the United States Office of Education, doing the same thing."

A statement of the Administration's view of the wartime function of NYA and CCC is scheduled today to be made before the committee where yesterday Senator McKellar contended that the Federal Government, through its youth-aid programs, is making expensive

Skies at Stake

By the Associated Press

Moscow, March 23.—Moderating weather has brought a burst of aerial warfare in which the Soviet air force, reinforced by American-made Airacobra fighters, destroyed 278 German planes since March 15, the Russians announced tonight.

The communique said 26 German craft were downed yesterday and three near Moscow today, while a supplement to this announcement listed 249 Nazi aircraft destroyed in the March 15-21 period. Soviet losses from March 15 through yesterday were listed at 88 craft.

Emphasis Shifts to Air

Emphasis was shifted to the air fighting as both the morning and night communiques today reported "no substantial changes" in positions on the land front.

A stiffening of German resistance was indicated all along the line, but in one sector of the Leningrad front the Russians reported 1800 Germans were killed and 30 blockhouses and machine-gun nests were destroyed in two days of fighting.

The morning communique told of particularly heavy fighting on the Kalinin front, between Moscow and

Prices Frozen On Refrigerators, Other Scarce Items

Ceiling prices were put on eight major "scarcity" articles last night as the OPA warned that the public "shall not be compelled to submit to unreasonable and inflated prices at retail simply because supplies are now short."

Ceilings were established for prices of refrigerators, typewriters, vacuum cleaners, washing machines, ironers, radios, phonographs and cooking and heating stoves.

The OPA reported many complaints of alleged profiteering since production of some of these articles was ordered curtailed.

Dirksen Proposes Congress Halve Its Mileage Pay

The 20 cents per mile reimbursement which members of Congress receive for travel was challenged yesterday by Representative Everett M. Dirksen (Republican), Illinois, who offered a bill in the House to cut the mileage allowance in half.

Dirksen estimated the legislation would cut Senatorial mileage from $51,000 to $25,500 and House mileage from $171,000 to $85,500.

Members have continued to collect the high mileage allowance in recent years while using their own automobiles for travel to and from the Capital.

Rendezvous Too Secret

MacArthur's Speedboat Almost Fired On by U. S. Ships in Error

By the United Press

Gen. MacArthur's Headquarters, Melbourne (Tuesday), March 24.—The official version of Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur's escape from the Bataan Peninsula of the Philippines was released today and revealed that the supreme Allied commander narrowly escaped machine-gunning by American ships when the speedboats in which his party was traveling reached an unnamed island rendezvous.

The American party, traveling in high-speed motor torpedo boats, roared into the island rendezvous without warning, the account said, and at first were mistaken for enemy craft.

The account also revealed that Gen. MacArthur and members of his party abandoned virtually all their baggage at the island rendezvous

The account described the adventure of the general and his party not as an escape but as a break through the enemy's lines

(The island upon which MacArthur landed from the fast motor torpedo boats has not been revealed but it has been assumed it was one of the southern Philippines Archipelago. The revelation that American ships were at the rendezvous was the first intimation that United States craft still are in those waters. Since the presence of surface ships in this area would seem extremely risky it was suggested that the "ships" referred to above may have been submarines which have been active in that vicinity.)

Gen. MacArthur Loses the Battle Of the Haircut

Melbourne, March 23 (AP).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur bosses the Allied armies in this part of the world, but in his own household the supreme command rests with his wife.

This was demonstrated today when Mrs. MacArthur took their small son, Arthur, on a shopping tour. She promptly deposited the boy in a barbershop chair and ordered a good haircut for him.

"The general said Arthur was not to have a haircut because he might catch cold," the smiling mother told the barber. "But look at him—he needs a haircut badly. His father is not around now to stop it, so let's trim it up."

4 British Subs Sink 11 Axis Warships

Victories Scored In Sight of Italian, Albanian Shorelines

By the Associated Press

London, March 23.—British submarines have destroyed two Italian submarines, one troopship and eight other transports within view of humiliated Fascists on the shores of Italy and Albania, the admiralty announced today even while Axis forces were striking with indifferent success at a British convoy elsewhere in the Mediterranean.

The largest individual haul for the four British submarines engaged was credited to Commander J. W. Linton, who sank six large schooners—one of them flying the Nazi flag—and a motorship jammed with troops. Disdaining the use of torpedoes, Linton surfaced his submarine and destroyed all seven vessels with gunfire.

(He was cited last year for sinking two Italian supply ships with his submarine, Pandora.)

New Italian Sub Sent Down

Another British submarine sank the new 1461-ton Italian submarine Ammiraglio Millo off Salo Point, Calabria, southern Italy, under the gaze of persons gathered on shore.

"While His Majesty's submarine was engaged in picking up survivors she was subjected to ineffectual machine-gun fire from land," the admiralty reported.

The second Italian submarine, of the 778-ton Argonauta class, was torpedoed and sunk in the southern approaches to the Straits of Messina, which separate the Italian mainland from Sicily.

"An attempt to rescue survivors from the U-boat who were struggling in the water was interfered with by enemy aircraft and had to be abandoned," the admiralty said.

The same British submarine was credited with torpedoing and "almost certainly" sinking a large, strongly escorted Axis supply ship.

The fourth British submarine, penetrating to the Adriatic Sea, used her deck gun to sink a small enemy supply ship then departed unscathed by the fire of Italian shore batteries in Albania.

As if to build a backfire to this series of British successes, the Italian command reported that a British convoy sailing to Malta had suffered "repeated hits" from Axis torpedo planes and that Italian naval formations had overtaken and engaged the convoy in the Gulf of Sirte this very afternoon, inflicting further damage. (The Germans claimed their bombers sank one ship and damaged two in this convoy.)

It was stated reliably in London that no British ships had been sunk, although damage to some was acknowledged.

The Italians claimed the British convoy consisted of eight or ten transports guarded by five to seven destroyers, but informed persons in London expressed doubts about any such large number of transports being sent to the Malta outpost.

War Sidelights

Australian Offers Self As a 'Bomb'

Sydney, Australia, March 23 (AP).—T. A. White, of Sydney, offered his services today as a human bomb "to wipe out a parcel of the enemy" and appealed for "20 other fools like me."

He made his offer in a letter to Air Minister A. S. Drakeford, describing himself as 42, married and a highly paid automotive executive with one good eye.

He proposed that he be permitted to steer a plane or speedboat fully loaded with high explosives into a Japanese aircraft carrier.

May 'Coventize' Malta

London, March 23 (AP).—The Nazi air commander who directed the devastation of Warsaw and Coventry, Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring, has been put in charge of German airmen in Sicily, it was reported today.

The move was interpreted here as possibly pointing to a stepped-up aerial offensive against Malta, possibly followed by sea-borne invasion. The 55-year-old marshal is expected to increase coordination between the German and Italian air forces, which operate from Sicily.

Malta has become known as one of the most bombed spots on earth. Today was typical. The Germans blasted away without pause from dawn to dusk, losing three planes for certain and two probables, six others were damaged. Not one R. A. F. fighter was lost.

'Mercy Ship' Departs

New York, March 23 (INS).—The "mercy ship" Sigilia, lights blazing and assured safe conduct by belligerent powers, will leave New York Wednesday with a cargo of food and medicine for the people of Greece, it was announced tonight.

A Swedish motorship, the Sicilia will make for Piraeus over a prearranged course. She will be guided through dangerous mine fields by pilots assigned to her by the various powers through whose waters she must pass.

The journey, first of this nature during the present war, was arranged by the Greek War Relief Association. Food, vitamins and medical supplies will be distributed in Greece by the International Red Cross.

Pole Loses Head

London, March 23 (AP).—The Poles announced today one of their countrymen named Nurbynski—operator of a secret Polish news agency in Poznon—had been beheaded by the Germans after a special tribunal had passed the death sentence.

These sources said they were advised that 200 Poles accused of reading his bulletins, picked up largely from British broadcasts, had been sent to concentration camps or forced labor in Germany.

Reds Encounter Stiffer Resistance

Leningrad and west of the capital.

On the northwestern sector it listed one "important place" and a smaller settlement captured by Red forces which killed 300 Nazis and captured quantities of booty in two stubborn engagements.

Stockholm dispatches said the Russians had surrounded an ancient walled city believed to be Novrogod, north of Lake Ilmen, and had pushed westward through Sychevka, a midway point on the north-south road between Rzhev and Vyazma.

In the south-central sector the dispatches said that Orel was partly encircled with Soviet forces threatening Karachev, midway between Orel and Bryansk.

The Germans declared that their troops were on the offensive along some parts of the front and that they were successful in repulsing Soviet assaults. In fighting presumably on the central front, the Nazi high command said in the last two days the Russians had lost "several thousand dead and a number of prisoners."

In the south, the Germans claimed that Soviet assaults on the Kerch Peninsula of the Crimea had "collapsed" while in the Donets basin the Russians were reported continuing heavy attacks without success.

Stressing the part the Nazi air force is playing in the bitter fighting, the Berlin communique reported destruction of more than 300 Red army vehicles of all kinds and 23 railway trains in aerial sorties behind the Russian lines.

The Germans claimed further that 54 Soviet planes were destroyed yesterday alone and that 137 Russian tanks were destroyed from March 18 to 22.

Petain Refuses Clemency, French Mutineers Shot

Vichy, March 23 (AP).—Two French sailors who wounded the captain of the freighter Gabriel Guisthau recently in an unsuccessful plot to deliver the ship to the anti-Axis nations, were executed by a firing squad at Oran today after Chief of State Petain refused their clemency plea.

The blockade-running freighter, part of a convoy guarded by French warships, was slipping through the Straits of Gibraltar in the dead of night when the armed seamen approached the captain on the bridge, ordered him to break away from the convoy and put into Gibraltar.

But the captain managed to flee the bridge, wounded slightly by one of the four shots fired at him. While the captain was contacting the engine room in an appeal for help, a French warship whose crew had heard the shots pulled alongside, boarded the freighter and put down the mutiny.

MacArthur Wires Thanks to Gordon For His Praise

Fulton R. Gordon, Washington builder and real estate dealer, who wired his praise to Gen. MacArthur a week ago, said last night he had received a reply from the Allied commander expressing "complete confidence in our ultimate victory."

Gen. MacArthur's telegram read:

"Thanks for your inspiring message. I have complete confidence in our ultimate victory."

India Reported Offered Status Like Egypt

By the United Press

New Delhi, March 23.—Sir Stafford Cripps has a plan to offer Indian political leaders which would free India from Britain except for an alliance binding her to fight until the war was won, it was reported tonight.

The plan was understood to propose:

India would be free in the sense that Egypt is free after concluding with Britain a treaty in which it would agree to a military alliance with the United Nations and promise to throw its full effort into the war until the victorious end.

India's territorial integrity would be maintained, with no split into separate Hindu and Moslem states. Coalition cabinets in the central and provincial governments, pledged to support the war efforts, would consist of representatives of all parties and main elements in the country.

India would have a voice in the postwar peace conferences as an independent nation.

Breaking silence for the first time since he left London, the Lord Privy Seal told newspapermen soon after his arrival here from Karachi this afternoon that he aimed to complete his mission in two weeks. Cripps said there was no time for long discussions.

He was confident that "the leaders of the main parties and interests of India will be ready to take quick decisions."

He said he had no doubt that the leading political organizations, once the political atmosphere had been clarified, would be ready to make "the maximum effort for preserving their country from the danger of aggression."

Gandhi Against "Scorched Earth"

Bombay, March 23 (AP).—Mohandas K. Gandhi appealed to the government today not to adopt a "scorced earth" policy in defending India because, he said, the mass of the people is opposed.

Writing in his newspaper, Harijan, the Indian leader declared the government could considerably ease the present situation and allay anxiety about the future if it announced unequivocably that such a policy never would be employed.

General Balkan Revolt Timed To Serb Drive

By the United Press

London, March 23.—Gen. Draja Mihailovic's army of thousands of Serbs is ready to swoop down again from the mountains on the Axis forces occupying Yugoslavia in a "spring offensive" which will coincide with a general "Balkan revolt," it was reported today.

A high Yugoslav government source here disclosed that Mihailovic had taken advantage of the last two months of lull, with operations limited by snow and severe cold, to line up anti-Axis forces throughout southeast Europe, including those in occupied Greece and Albania, for a far-flung campaign of guerilla warfare and sabotage.

"Robin Hood" Army Larger

His aim, this source said, was to open a second front against the Germans with enough vigor to convince the Allies that it would be worth while for them to send an expeditionary force into the area and to inspire patriots in other occupied countries—especially Norway and France—to unleash campaigns against the invaders.

The "Robin Hood" army that gave such a good account of itself last year is larger than before and has acquired more arms and other equipment from unrevealed sources, it was said, but it still must battle in unorthodox ways, making lightning raids against Axis garrisons, outposts and communication lines.

The Yugoslav government in exile here, which is in constant touch with Mihailovic in his secret headquarters in the Suvobar Mountains in the heart of Serbia, has received reports showing that the Germans and Italians have strengthened their garrisons in anticipation of the spring campaign.

It was estimated that more than 400,000 Axis troops are now in Yugoslavia, including five German divisions and seven Italian divisions. The remainder are Bulgarian and Hungarian troops.

At least 50,000 German, Italian and pro-Axis Yugoslav soldiers have been killed by Mihailovic's men since the country was occupied last April, reports partly verified by Axis communiques have shown.

500 Offer Selves For Gas Experiment

London, March 23.—More than 500 Londoners have volunteered to be "blistered" by mustard gas in response to an appeal from the London Homeopathic Hospital, it was revealed tonight. They are to aid in research for an antidote. Experiments with the first 20 volunteers are now being made, one of the research doctors said tonight.

Polish Army Chief Arrives, Opposes Opening New Fronts

Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski, Polish army commander in chief, arriving here yesterday for a conference with the President, warned against the opening of new war fronts and characterized Gen. MacArthur as a symbol of offensive action "so indispensable to win the war."

The tall graying Pole, in khaki and a cap with silver braid and black visor, cermoniously greeted at Union Station with lifted hats, clicking heels and salutes, had dictated a statement on the ride here from Montreal, where he landed in a bomber Saturday.

"In this phase of the war," the statement said, "the problem does not so much rest in creating a second, third or fourth new front—what is essential is to fight on all existing fronts like MacArthur."

All matters pertaining to the war's strategy "are now being concentrated here." He said it was "invitable" that he should come here to lay before the President some of his views on "present and future developments."

The Russian armies, the statement went on, "are pressing the German armed forces out of Russian territory, but at the same time they are gradually approaching the eastern boundaries of Poland. This in itself creates new problems for my country which have to be taken into account and discussed here where the declaration of the United Nations was signed."

He said that "as a soldier" he could not refrain from immediately "expressing my profound admiration for America's foremost soldier—Gen. MacArthur. In my opinion he symbolizes that spirit of offensive action so indispensable to win the war."

"The myth of German invincibility" has been destroyed, he said, by the "splendid achievements" of the Soviet armies in defending national soil.

A delegation headed by Gen. Sikorski will confer with lend-lease officials about equipment for a Polish army of seven divisions now being formed in Russia, the Polish Embassy has said. This force, it was said, is composed of prisoners taken by the Russian army upon its invasion of Poland following the German attack in 1939. The general, also prime minister of his government in exile, expected to stay in Washington a week.

He and the party were met at the train by George T. Summerlin, chief of protocol, State Department, and Polish Embassy representatives. Lord Halifax, British Ambassador, stood in the center of a large delegation of Polish and other digitaries in the Presidential suite of the station to receive Gen. Sikorski and party, which included Col. Leon Mitkiewicz, deputy chief of staff, Polish army; Wing Comdr. Rohden Kleoszynski; Lieut. Col. Janus Dinski, Dr. Joseph H. Retinger, former charge d'affaires at Moscow, and the Right Rev. Msgr. Zygmunt Kaczynski, member of Polish national council in London. Msgr. Kaczynsky, the embassy said, was the last Polish priest to escape the homeland after the Germans came in. He has reported to his church on German persecutions of Catholics in Poland.

A misunderstanding of train schedules caused the Soviet Ambassador, Maxim Litvinoff, to deliver a wholly unintentional "snub" to the Polish Prime Minister.

Diplomatic observers, as is their custom, immediately began wondering what the significance of his absence was.

If they had lingered at the depot for another two hours, they would have found Litvinoff alone, pacing the platform, wondering why Sikorski's train was late. He had been erroneously informed by a embassy clerk that the train would arrive at 2:55 p. m., E. W. T., instead of 12:55 p. m. The two men planned to meet later.

Aussies May Send U. S. More Sugar

Canberra (Tuesday), March 24 (AP).—More Australian sugar may be sent to the United States and Canada if the shipping facilities are available, Commerce Department officials said today.

Because of war-restricted markets Australia has a surplus. Fairly large consignments already have been sent to the United States, but officials believe more could be shipped.

but the pilot is safe."

The battle line lay along the Pyu River, 125 miles above Rangoon, where Chinese made an initial attack last Friday, killing 200 Japanese.

Initial reports of the battle, published in a Chinese communique here, said it was still in progress. The Chinese troops employed were a shock force armed with United States battle equipment. It was assumed that they were part of the Fifth and Sixth armies, commanded by United States Lieut. Joseph W. Stilwell, which have been assigned to the north Burma sector.

An American volunteer group communique reported three crushing raids on the Allied Air Base "in central Burma" in 24 hours—one by 80 bombers and fighters Saturday and two Sunday, one by 40 and another by 100 planes. The bombers were reported to have dropped parachutists behind the British lines en route to their objective.

Military officials here said the fact that only two raiders were shot down in the first raid, while "several" Allied planes were unaccounted for and ground installations were damaged, spoke for itself. Details of the subsequent attacks were lacking but it was acknowledged that they were "serious" and had caused damage to Royal air force property.

[Axis sources put out roundabout reports that a strong Japanese fleet had appeared in the Bay of Bengal, that is between western Burma and India proper, and claimed that enemy landings in the Indian Province of Bengal could be expected "at any moment." An Associated Press dispatch from London said the Rome radio had broadcast the report, claiming that it originated in Shanghai.]

MacArthur, Australians Map Strategy

By the United Press

Gen. MacArthur's Headquarters, Melbourne, March 23.—Gen. Douglas MacArthur, still in cotton khaki awaiting a new uniform from the tailor, met for 75 minutes today with Arms Minister Francis M. Forde and Lieut. Gen. Vernon A. H. Sturdee, chief of the Australian general staff, to plan a United Nations offensive against the Japs.

It was the first of many meetings which will be held this week to work out the intricate details of a strategy for running the war from this subcontinent and driving the Japanese out of the Southwest Pacific.

Forde left for Canberra after the conference to submit a preliminary report to Prime Minister John Curtin.

Among the subjects discussed, Forde said, were the extent to which United States aid and policy will have to be adopted by the United Nations, Australian war preparations, and the present position of the war.

Securities Taken Out, Sayre Says

dependent upon their former Filipino servants or the Red Cross for food, Sayre said.

He declared he was "quite concerned" over the food situation and was working with the Red Cross on plans to send a relief ship into Manila to replenish existing stocks. If Japan gives permission for such a Red Cross ship to get through the war zones Sayre said he hoped to bring out the "wounded and sick" among them.

Before he was "bombed out" of his Manila headquarters and moved to Corregidor on Christmas Eve, there had not been many civilian casualties from bombing in the city, the High Commissioner said. On the whole, the Japanese bombing of Manila was confined to military objectives, he added.

Although cut off from any direct information on conditions in Manila since January 1, Sayre said that as far as he could determine, the Americans and British were "getting along all right."

The Japanese have been relaxing the restrictions somewhat, and women and children have been allowed to go to their homes, he continued, emphasizing that this data was "pure hearsay."

Sayre said that very few civilians had moved from Manila to Corregidor, and that those who had, as well as the troops, preferred to be on Bataan Peninsula, primitive as are living conditions there.

"It's like stepping into a different world, returning from three months under fire in Corregidor," he stated. "You live like rats in a tunnel, in the bowels of the fort. On Bataan you can get some fresh air anyway."

The American High Commissioner praised the American and Filipino troops, declaring their spirits were "perfectly tremendous." They out-fought the Japs every time, he stated.

Asked about getting reinforcement to the troops, Sayre declared it would be a "long and very difficult job."

"We've not only got to get supplies and men to Australia," he stated, "but we've then got to fight them north, some 4000 miles."

The American-Filipino forces will defend Bataan and Corregidor "to the last ditch," Sayre said, predicting that Japan will decide that their capture will "cost too much" and use their forces elsewhere.

Sayre declined to go into detail about his trip from Corregidor to the United States, but revealed that his wife—daughter of President Woodrow Wilson—and their small son, Billy Graves, were en route home.

With some nine members of his staff, including Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Willoughby, of Washington, they made the dangerous trip out of the Philippines with him, he said. Presumably, they are making the latter stages of the trip by other means than the clipper on which Sayre came home.

Some 30 other members of Sayre's staff, including eight or ten women, remained in Manila to look after the Americans there, he said.

Sayre said his economic adviser, Robert J. Huffcutt, had volunteered for service with the Army. He was given a commission and is now fighting under Lieut. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, along with his two military aides, Lieut. Col. Cyrl Marron and Capt. William J. Priestley, the high commissioner added.

Speedup Sought In Plane Ferrying

By Francis J. Connor

Copyright by Chicago Sun

A Congressional committee today will buckle down to the task of trying to perfect, through legislation, a system whereby the speed of deliveries will keep pace with the production of American war planes.

In the balance will hang the status of approximately 2000 commercial airline pilots, 30 per cent of whom hold Reserve Officers commissions. They fly passenger transport planes, and ferry military and naval craft from factory to field when they choose, if at all, with delay to the war effort of the Army air forces.

Failure of airline and pilot representatives, officers of the Army air forces and the legislators to reach agreement on a proposed emergency measure to extend the present maximum of 85 hours flying time a month per pilot to 100 hours monthly, combined with the alleged continued reluctance of experienced civilian pilots to donate the added time to ferrying Army and Navy fighting and bombing planes, will compel the War Department to invade control of commercial aviation, according to informed sources.

Thus far, the armed services have attempted to operate the war plane production and distribution program with a minimum of interference and inconvenience to the commercial companies.

Of late, however, the Army air forces, it was learned, openly have expressed disappointment at the apparent slowness with which regularly scheduled domestic pilots have offered their services to fly combat aircraft from factories to training fields and shipping points for distribution to the fighting fronts.

Army sources said today they foresaw that in the near future finished fighting craft would be piled up in scattered production centers for lack of efficient delivery to vital areas unless the commercial companies and pilots cooperated more fully in ferrying them.

To avoid such a situation, the House Interstate Commerce Commission will begin hearings tomorrow on a war emergency proposal favored by the Army and Navy but frowned upon by the pilots. This is to extend the monthly 85 hours prescribed by the Civil Aeronautics Act to 100 flying hours monthly. This legislation, according to the Army, would release between 300 and 400 commercial pilots outright to the Army and Navy every month for uninterrupted ferrying service. It was introduced by Representative Clarence F. Lea (Democrat), of California, chairman of the committee.

If enacted, the legislation, for the duration of the war, would affect but not amend the current civil aeronautics regulations. The proposed 100 hours monthly might be expanded further in the case of an emergency—to permit individual pilots to take to its destination any war plane they undertake to ferry. The legislation would in no way draft the commercial pilots or demand an airline release pilots to the Army or Navy.

In view of the bickering reported existing in the present delivery setup, observers see in the California Congressman's proposal a final effort to provide a polite method for commercial airlines and pilots, as civilian volunteers, to make the necessary speedy ferrying of fighting craft.

The Army anticipates stiff opposition to the legislation from the Air Lines Pilots Association which has voiced displeasure over longer hours of airline flying, and from the airlines. Recently the Army turned down as "very fine and patriotic" but not in the best interests of efficiency a proposal submitted by airlines. This proposal would have permitted pilots to fly an extra 15 hours a month on ferrying duty for the armed air forces but would not require any statutory change. This plan would have fitted in with the present operations of the airlines wherein each company ferries military planes on or near its own routes.

According to the airlines' plan, if each of the 2000 domestic pilots donated 15 hours extra a month for ferrying service this would provide the equivalent of 30,000 hours a month—an amount equal to the full-time ferrying service of 300 and 400 pilots, since pilots ferrying military planes average about 75 hours a month flying time.

Army officials, however, said the plan contained drawbacks of a technical nature. They continued with the proposed legislative plan, which would enable airlines to release between 15 and 20 per cent of their pilots for ferrying service.

2-Hour Conference With Correspondents

United States Headquarters, Australia, March 23 (AP).—With confidence and deep feeling, Gen. Douglas MacArthur spent two hours today in giving news correspondents a complete account of the Pacific war situation.

The conference was "off the record," but all the 50 correspondents agreed that the supreme commander left nothing to the imagination as he strode to and fro in a makeshift press headquarters and dealt out the facts.

MacArthur spoke for most of the time with statesmanlike calm and with a precision of expression, but his face was contorted as he mentioned cruelty and treachery of the Japanese foe.

In emphasizing his intensity of feeling against the "devils" accused of atrocities on Allied nationals, the general shook his index finger.

While sparing nothing the stark realities of the situation, he declared his unbounded faith in the cause of the United Nations, and his voice became husky with the depth of his emotions.

MacArthur summed up his determination in replies to congratulatory messages from Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

To the one he said, "I will do my best;" to the other, "I have absolute confidence in complete victory."

triumph over the aggressor."

Raids made by American Army heavy bombers Saturday and Sunday over Rabaul, New Britain and Lae, New Guinea, in which 11 enemy planes were destroyed and ground installations damaged, were reported in the communique. This confirmed prior press reports of the action from Australia.

Texts of yesterday's Army and Navy communiques follow:

Navy Communique No. 80

"Far East—United States submarines operating in Japanese waters have recently added the following to the list of enemy merchant vessels sunk or damaged in that area:

"One 7000-ton tanker sunk.

"One 8000-ton ship sunk.

"One 5000-ton freighter sunk.

"Two 2000-ton freighters damaged.

"In addition to these merchant ships one enemy destroyer or anti-submarine vessel was attacked and probably sunk.

"The above actions have not been reported in any previous Navy Department communiques.

War Dept. Communique No. 157

"1. The Philippine theater:

The American and Philippine troops fighting under the command of Lieut. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright have sent a message to Gen. Douglas MacArthur congratulating him on his safe arrival in Australia and on the assumption of supreme command in the South Pacific. They sent their commander their affectionate greetings and pledged their loyalty and devotion. They declared they would continue the defense of the Philippines with the same zeal and courage manifested under Gen. MacArthur's direction. They expressed their confidence that under his leadership troops of the United Nations in Australia and the Philippines would triumph over the aggressor.

"2. Australia:

"Confirmation of the American participation in air raids on Rabaul, New Britain and Lae, New Guinea, on March 21 and 22 has been received by the War Department. These raids were previously reported in press dispatches from Australia. On March 21 two American Army heavy bombers of the Flying Fortress type attacked the Rabaul airdrome, effecting considerable damage.

"Japanese fighter planes attempted to interespt our bombers and two enemy planes were hit and probably shot down. On March 22 our heavy bombers attacked the air field at Lae. At least nine enemy planes on the ground were destroyed.

"3. There is nothing to report from other areas.

Indian Reservation To Get 20,000 Japs

U. S. Maps Plans To Free Coastal Areas of Aliens

The War Relocation Authority said yesterday 20,000 Japanese would be moved to the Colorado River Indian Reservation at Parker, Ariz., in the first large-scale relocation of evacuees from Pacific Coast military areas.

A colonization plan has been worked out by the authority, the Indian service, Indian owners of the land and the War Department, the announcement said.

It provides for four or five temporary, self-sustaining colonies, with the purpose of furnishing homes and useful employment to the evacuated Japanese and of preparing the land for us after the war.

About 90,000 acres of land are available for development of irrigated farming, the announcement said, with an adequate supply of water to be diverted from the Colorado River by the Headgate Rock Dam recently completed by the Indian Irrigation Service.

Milton S. Eisenhower, director of the authority, emphasized that the settlement is purely temporary and the land will revert to the Indians at the end of the war, and "that the project will be designated to provide humane and constructive living and working conditions for the colonists."

600 Make Camp Ready

Manzamar, Calif., March 23 (U.P.).—A dusty caravan of 350 family automobiles, trucks and jalopies rumbled northeastward from Los Angeles today, along the coast, then across the Mojave Desert and over the Sierra Nevadas to the Owens Valley induction center as West Coast Japanese began moving inland for the duration.

The last rattling jalopy of the caravan bringing 600 volunteer Japanese workers to the valley was expected to arrive early tonight. Another 400 workers arrived during the afternoon by train and bus.

The caravan included only men—aged merchants, young workmen and schoolboys in worn caps and tattered hats but many wearing bright new lettered sweaters won for participation in school athletic events.

Today's contingent, all volunteers, masons, plumbers, cooks, bakers and barbers—who will get the giant camp ready for the mass evacuation, were the first of 112,985 Japanese who will leave the coast under Army supervision.

Jap Minister Seized

Albany, N. Y., March 23 (INS).—The Rev. Yutaka Minakuchi, 53, a Congregationalist minister, has been arrested as an enemy alien allegedly in the pay of the Japanese consulate, it was announced today by Arthur J. Cornelius, agent in charge of the Albany office of the FBI.

The minister was taken into custody at Glover, Vt., where he had served as a supply preacher for several churches since 1938.

Authorities said Minakuchi came to the United States from Japan in 1897. During the first World War he was active in liberty bond and Red Cross drives. After that conflict he was a chautauqua circuit lecturer. In 1938 he moved to Glover, where he married Miss Nellie Cook, of that community. They have two daughters.

Agents Inquiry

Scribner's Backer Before Jury

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Charles Shipman Payson, the New York financier who put up $100,000 to operate the anti-British magazine, Scribner's Commentator, was questioned yesterday before the special grand jury on Axis agents.

Payson was accompanied to Judiciary Square by Attorney Alfons B. Latta, who left after Payson was called before the grand jurors by Special Prosecutor William Power Maloney.

Payson was the P of the "P & S" publishing company which operated the isolationist review. The S" was Douglas M. Stewart. Payson's $100,000 amounted to two-thirds of the capital on which Scribner's operated until its recent collapse in Lake Geneva, Wis. The other $50,000 came from Jeremiah Milbank, New York banker and Southern Railway official.

Payson Later Withdrew

Stewart also negotiated with Milbank for $25,000 to close up the affairs of the "No Foreign Wars Committee' which folded up after extentive anti-interventionist agitation under the leadership of Verne Marshall, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, editor.

Payson withdrew his support from Scribner's after it became public, through an investigation by The Post, that the Lake Geneva isolationists were conducting another, flagrantly pro-Axis enterprise in the form of a weekly newspaper called "The Herald."

Nobody knows where the money for The Herald came from. The explanation given by its promoters, The Post learned, was that more than $30,000 was advanced by mysterious benefactors who threw bales of $20 bills into the living room windows, left bundles of bills on downstairs hall tables or simply handed currency to the promoters in crowds.

The Herald pronounced Hitler's invasion of Russia a "holy crusade." Like Scribner's, it was widely mailed to Army posts, air fields and fighting ships in Alaska, Hawaii, Panama Canal Zone and the Philippines. Among its writers was Ralph Townsend, now under indictment here for criminal conspiracy and failing to register as an agent of the Japanese Government.

Payson Wed Joan Whitney

Payson is president of Payson & Co., Inc., and an official of several steel, manufacturing and banking companies. He is the husband of the former Joan Payne Whitney, whose share in the Whitney estate was reported to be 27 million dollars.

Also a grand jury witness yesterday was William Griffin, publisher of the newspaper New York Enquirer. When a subpena was issued for him several weeks ago he was reported missing and finally turned up in Havana, Cuba.

Later Griffin came to Washington to testify, but pleaded that a heart attack made him unable to go from his hotel to Judiciary Square. So he went back to New York without giving his testimony. Last week Justice F. Dickinson Letts signed an order requiring Griffin to submit to examination by Government heart experts. Yesterday he appeared, accompanied by Attorney William J. Rapp, New York. He was ordered to return for further questioning today.

Griffin's paper was a subscriber of the news service of Transocean, the German agency convicted last summer of being a propaganda organization. His was one of the papers which issued special editions in 1940, urging that Representative Hamilton Fish be the Republican nominee for President.

A Washington writer for Griffin's paper was Prescott Dennett, Capital operative for the Nazi propaganda machine of George Sylvester Viereck, convicted German agent. Through Dennett, Viereck sent his instructions and money to his Capitol Hill purchasing agent, George Hill, who was secretary of Representative Fish, and who is now in prison for perjury.

Viereck yesterday made a new effort to go free on bail. The Government's fears that Viereck will be rescued by a Nazi submarine, the Viereck motion said, are preposterous.

To overcome the Government protest that Viereck ought not to be allowed to resume his Nazi propaganda, his motion offered to promise that he would do no speaking or writing while his appeal is pending.

Willkie to Have His Say in '44 if Things Go Wrong

New York, March 23 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie, the 1940 Republican Presidential candidate, said in a magazine article released today: "If I see the conduct of the war being bungled, the operation of our economic system being wrecked, and the prospect of a decent world after the war vanishing, I expect to have my say in the 1944 election."

Willkie, in the article in Look Magazine, answered 18 formal questions and revealed that after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, December 7, 1941, he wrote a letter to the President telling him that he had no particular desire to serve in any kind of a post in the New Deal Government, but that as an American, he would be willing to do whatever he might be called upon to do to aid the Nation's war effort.

Willkie said he had told those who suggested Government service to him that he would rather not be associated with the present Administration "because I do not want my right to comment on its policies and conduct curtailed."

Prices Frozen on Refrigerators And Other 'Scarcity' Articles

In the most sweeping action taken to combat price inflation since the outbreak of the emergency, the Office of Price Administration last night issued a series of orders freezing prices on a list of seven major household appliances and on new typewriters.

Effective next Monday, March 30, the latest regulations bring under Federal price control at the retail level mechanical refrigerators, vacuum cleaners and attachments, heating and cooking stoves and ranges, washing machines, iron machines, radio receiving sets and phonographs.

"Enforced scarcity will not be permitted to dictate the price of any article subject to OPA control now or in the future," said Acting Administrator John E. Hamm, in announcing the action.

"What we are saying by today's orders," he went on, "is that the public shall not be compelled to submit to unreasonable prices at retail simply because supplies are short."

Production of all of the eight articles of consumer's durable goods has been drastically curtailed or completely suspended because of the demand of war industries for the metals used in their manufacture. It was pointed out that this growing scarcity has resulted in sharp price increases at wholesale and retail levels and in thousands of complaints from the buying public of profiteering.

"Inasmuch as there has been no increase in manufacturers' prices it is obvious that wholesale and retail prices have been pushed up simply on the theory that the public should be glad to get a new refrigerator or washer or vacuum cleaner or radio at any price in these times," Hamm declared.

"This is the reason that makes for profiteering and stimulates inflation. We have the duty of preventing these twin evils and are acting accordingly."

In addition to setting maximum prices at retail, the orders also apply at the wholesale level, and, in the case of the regulation on vacuum cleaners and new typewriters, place a ceiling over manufacturers' prices for the first time.

Four of the new regulations—those applying to new typewriters, domestic washing and ironing machines, radio receiving sets and phonographs, and domestic heating and cooking stoves and ranges—are 60-day temporary orders and peg prices at the level of last Thursday, March 19. The two permanent regulations, applying to household vacuum cleaners and attachments and household mechanical refrigerators use for the ceiling prices the manufacturer's recommended retail price list and freeze the price margins of wholesale distributors at the levels prevailing October 1 to 15, 1941.

"Today's action makes price control a matter of direct and personal interest to millions of Americans for the first time," Hamm said.

Hamm called particular attention to a feature common to all but one of today's regulations, requiring every dealer to post in a conspicuous place on his premises a large notice setting forth the make, model number and maximum price of the article offered for sale. In the case of vacuum cleaners which are largely sold from door to door a label must be attached to the appliance or attachment setting forth the maximum cash price as established by the OPA.

Congress Tax Experts Study Levy on Sales

Staff experts of the Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation are preparing a sales tax amendment to the tax bill at the independent request of several members of the House Ways and Means Committee, it was learned last night.

The move is designed to place "a workable sales tax plan" before the committee, primarily as a basis of discussion. The Treasury's seven-billion-dollar tax recommendations included no plans for sales levies. Treasury officials strongly recommended against them.

But sentiment for a sales tax, along lines of the graduated British system, has steadily been growing in the committee. It was expected that any plan drawn by staff experts would incorporate the graduated principle.

Want "Concrete" Plan

Representative Robertson (Democrat), of Virginia; Representative Disney (Democrat), of Oklahoma, an at least one other influential member of the committee are known to have requested that a practicable sales tax proposal be drawn so the committee will "have something concrete" before it. Across the Copitol, Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, was one of the first to favor adaptation to American use of the British sales tax principle.

Representative Robertson, who believes "we will have to come to it either now or at some future date," believes the plan could be made to yield about two and a half billion dollars, or a third of the new revenue requested by the President in his budget message.

Representative Disney thought sales tax rates should be enacted "which together with excess profits taxes would raise the bulk of the seven billion dollars asked."

The British adopted a general sales tax or purchase tax as part of their internal revenue system in the fall of 1940. The tax applies to wholesale merchants and manufacturers who deal in items subject to the tax and the levy normally is charged at the time when the goods are sold by the wholesaler to the retailer.

British Have Heavy Tax

The British plan applies a basic rate of 33 1-3 per cent of the wholesale value to goods regarded as luxuries, those which may await normal times for replacement, and goods of a nonessential character, a staff study of the British system recently disclosed. This basic rate is the tax equivalent of about 24 per cent of the retail price. Taxed under this high rate would be such items as furs, real silk, lace, china, perfumes, carpets, rugs, musical instruments, jewelry, sculture and other goods which do not require frequent replacement.

A reduced rate of 16 2-3 per cent of the wholesale price is charged against goods not in the category of luxuries, such as adults' clothing, boots, shoes, and even newspapers and periodicals. This tax is equivalent of about 12 per cent of the retail price.

A third group, while included in the general classification, are exempt as essential to the welfare of the community. This includes children's clothing and footwear, household brooms and brushes and essential drugs and ambulances.

The Ways and Means Committee meanwhile departed from broader aspects of the tax program to consider Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's request for elimination of the present percentage depreciation allowance in computing taxes on oil wells and mine owners.

Three oil State witnesses, led by former Senator Thomas P. Gore of Oklahoma, appeared before the committee in opposition to this Treasury recommendation.

Angered McNary Blisters Senator Green For Giving New Material Against Langer

Minority Leader McNary, of Oregon, yesterday declared that the chairman of the Senate Elections Committee, Senator Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island, attempted to influence the "jury" in the Langer case by inserting in the Senate record a letter from the present North Dakota Governor disclaiming approval of the conduct of William Langer while he was the State's chief executive.

"I decline to be placed in the position of having in any manner sanctioned or condoned Mr. Langer's methods while Governor of this State," read the letter from Gov. John Moses. "I think it is only fair to say that neither I nor they (the people of North Dakota) approve of the action of any Governor in accepting financial favors from those who are dealing with the State and making large profits out of apparent favoritism."

Recalls Broker Deals

The Governor referred to a charge, one of several counts on which the committee has recommended "exclusion" of Senator Langer (Republican), that a Minneapolis broker's associate was "using a share" of profits from bond deals made while Langer was Governor "to purchase large tracts of land from Gov. Langer at excessive prices."

The letter was read to the Senate, at Green's request, after receipt of a telegram from Moses objecting to statements that he continued dealing with the broker after Moses succeeded Langer as Governor.

McNary angrily objected that the letter was introduced after testimony in the Langer case was closed. The letter, declared McNary, was, in effect, a brief by which the Governor attempted to "place his own analysis on the testimony which was submitted by the committee." McNary said:

"I am amazed that the committee would attempt to introduce into this case evidence of this kind, in this fashion. It does not square itself with common fairness . . . Really, in my opinion (introduction of the letter), casts a cloud on the chairman of the committee who attempts to influence Senators who should be jurors in a case of this kind."

Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, chairman of the subcommittee selected to investigate Langer, contended that introduction of a newspaper article by Senator Murdock (Democrat), of Utah, during his defense of Langer, was equally violative of proper procedure.

Green explained, off the floor, that he presented the letter merely to give Moses' side of the question.

As instructed by the committee at a meeting yesterday, Green offered a simplified version of part of its resolution of "exclusion" with the request that the first part of the resolution be considered separately from the second. The first part of the resolution maintains that the Langer case does not "fall within the Constitutional provisions for expulsion by a two-thirds vote." Earlier, a substitute resolution that Langer could not be excluded by a majority vote was offered by Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, but action on it was deferred.

Referring to a statement by Senator Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, that the Senate could not get a quorum if senatorial careers were subjected to the same scrutiny as has Senator Langer's past, Senator Tunnell (Democrat), of Delaware, declared:

"If that statement is correct, there should be wholesale resignations. If that statement is false, there should be one. It seems to require no judgment whatever to criticize the Committee on Privileges and Elections."

Two Marines Made Major Generals

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated Brig. Gen. John Marston, 58, of San Diego, Calif., commander of the Marine Corps in Iceland, to be a major general.

The President also nominated Brig. Gen. Alexander Vandergrift, 55, of Washington, commanding general of Infantry troops of the First Marine Division, Fleet Marine Force, New River, N. C., for a similar rank.

Capt. Monroe Kelly, U. S. N., of Williamsburg, Va., was nominated to be a rear admiral. The last available report on Kelly's assignment was that he had been given a command at sea.

troduced into the record the following names and figures to show the alleged percentage of profit:

Co., New York, 35 per cent; Wellington Sears Co., New York, 58 per cent, and Wollon Sack Optical Co., New York, 40.3 per cent.

Jack, a former business agent for a machinists' union, and three of his employes told an amazing story of booming wartime salaries and bonuses and of virtually Utopian working conditions under which employes received fat wage envelopes and banqueted each month at the expense of their employer.

The company was organized by Jack in 1939 in Palo Alto, Calif., and was moved to Cleveland in 1940 and reincorporated because of difficulties over the union hiring hall issue in California. Jack's associates are his son, William, and Ralph Heintz, who developed the airplane starter.

Toland said the company holds an exclusive patent on its product and has refused to reduce prices on sales to the Government. He said the cost of manufacturing the product is $272 and the unit price quoted the Navy is $600—a $328 profit before taxes are deducted.

"It's about time we seize that patent!" exclaimed Representative Melvin Maas (Republican), of Minnesota.

Jack testified that in March, 1941, he and his associates had put "every cent we had" into the company and "it was broke." Yet, he described how in the latter part of 1940 the company gave each employe—in addition to a bonus—a watch, a $100 bill and a $2500 insurance policy.

On the last Saturday of each month, he said, all company employes are entertained at a banquet in a leading Cleveland hotel. He said he operated under a closed shop contract with organized labor; that his workers voted to work two shifts of 12 hours each instead of three eight-hour shifts, and that they are paid time and one-half for time worked between 8 and 12 hours a day and double time for all over that and for Saturday work.

Under stimulus of war orders, according to testimony today, the once "broke" company made this startling record of expenditures:

A total of $39,356 in salary and bonuses was paid to Adeline Bowman, private secretary to Jack. Her salary was raised from $5000 to $25,000 in 1941. She has received $18,295 so far this year.

Jack received a $25,000 bonus this month and his son and Heintz each got $20,000.

Harry F. Yoxtheimer, assistant comptroller, received an $11,000 bonus last December after he had worked only 46 days for the company. He testified he did not think he had earned the bonus, but "it was Mr. Jack's policy to pay high salaries and take care of key personnel."

Jack and Heintz bought $900,000 worth of Government bonds in January and February from what Toland described as war profits. He said "they are buying Government bonds with Government money."

The company, according to Toland, reported 1941 income taxes of $172,220. He said that if the bonuses paid had been disallowed as operating costs, the firm's tax bill would have ben $906,801.

Miss Bowman, Jack's secretary, was questioned closely about her duties and she said she did "good, hard loyal work." She said she has worked for Jack for 22 years, and identified personnel records showing that she received a bonus of $13,295 on March 5, 1942.

She denied Jack had sought to reduce his excess profits taxes by distributing large salaries and bonus payments.

"He's generous and is the most wonderful man in the world," she said.

"Well," commented Vinson, "any man who will throw the Governments' money away like that ought to be defended."

She revealed that she used her 1941 bonuses and $60,000 in securities she had acquired to buy insurance "to take care of my old age."

"Do you know that your employer is giving away the Government's money?" asked Chairman Carl Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia.

Miss Bowman did not reply.

Maas asked her whether she knew how many school children would have to buy defense stamps to pay her bonuses.

Again she was silent.

Donald Lake, comptroller, said in past years he worked as an accountant for annual salaries of between $2000 and $2400. He is on the Jack & Heintz payroll for $7500 a year and in 1941 his bonuses totaled $25,153.

Asked by Maas what he thought about taking these bonuses, Lake inquired:

"Why not?"

"No! Why not;" Maas explained, angrily. "As long as the suckers will pay it."

Economy Bloc Maps Death Of CCC, NYA

"mollycoddles" out of young men.

McKellar laid before the committee his demand for liquidation of the agencies. He appeared as a witness at the opening of committee hearings on his bill to terminate NYA and CCC December 1, 1942.

Byrd Supports McKellar

In his fight on NYA and CCC, McKellar is supported before the committee by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the Joint Economy Committee, but it appeared from the line of questioning taken by Labor committee members that support for the drive is lacking in that body.

Byrd is slated to appear before the Labor Committee today to make public for the first time testimony concerning the two agencies taken from the secret records of hearings before his committee which recommended abolition of NYA and CCC.

Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt also is scheduled to be a witness during hearings which probably will continue through Friday. McNutt may state the Administration's position on the agencies.

Members of the "economy bloc," meanwhile, were considering the feasibility of introducing a new bill to abolish the agencies and have it referred to another committee.

Senator McKellar declared, however, that such a measure could be referred to no other committee. But the ranking—and influential—member of the Senate Appropriations Committee added:

"There are other ways to get at this thing."

McKellar read into the committee's record yesterday a letter from NYA Administrator Aubrey Williams to Bernard S. Miller, New Jersey State administrator, in which Williams urged "very strongly" that "every consideration" be given to "an intensive drive to speed up the process" of certifying youths for NYA work programs.

The letter was made a part of the Economy Committee's hearing December 2, five days before Pearl Harbor. The date of the letter was not recorded.

Reservoirs to Fill NYA Quotas

After observing that because of war expansion of American industries "it is reasonable to anticipate that there will be increased opportunities for private employment for youth on NYA work programs," Williams' letter said.

"It is highly desirable, of course, that full opportunity be taken to put NYA workers in contact with possible openings in private industry, but it is equally important that the places left vacant on NYA projects by such transfer should immediately be filled."

The purpose of the certification "speed up," Williams said, was to establish "reservoirs to fill any vacancies that may occur in your quotas." The letter continued:

"I am not recommending general publicity in regard to this, but rather that your employment division concentrate quietly but intensively on the building up of its files on youth awaiting assignment, both through stimulating the certifying agencies of your State to greater activity and by the increased use of your privilege of NYA certification.

"In the face of something approaching a national emergency, it is essential that the many youth needing our help be afforded an opportunity to receive the benefit of the NYA work experience."

McKellar testified that one member of an NYA student delegation that recently called at his office to ask him not to press for action on his bill, told him he wanted NYA continued because he wished to "keep out of the Army." He quoted the student as saying: "I know more about what I can do for my country than the generals in the Army."

$511,388 for Phone Calls

In 1941, NYA spent $511,388 for telephone calls with more than half the amount spent for long-distance messages, McKellar stated, pounding the table to emphasize his point that the expenditures were made by a relief agency. He later referred to the practice of Federal agencies designating "publicity departments" as "information offices," referring, apparently, to a statement in the economy committee record to the effect that the Government is prohibited by law from hiring "publicity agents."

"If these people have spent this money this way, they've spent it because Congress appropriated the money," remarked Senator Hill (Democrat), of Alabama.

"There is something in what the Senator says," responded McKellar who contended that FSA and CCC were "perfectly proper" in depression years but "indefensible" now.

Labor-Profits Battle May Block Recess

in handling the Smith-Vinson bill. Hearings are now under way before the Naval Committee on the bill, which limits profits to 6 per cent of costs, and suspends the 40-hour week, overtime payments and the closed shop on war contracts.

Chairman Vinson of the Naval Affairs Committee thinks members should go home during the recess and "determine for themselves whether the public wants legislation."

"I am satisfied they will find the country is overwhelmingly for this bill," Vinson said. "We can come back after the recess and enact a bill with teeth in it."

Other advocates of labor legislation, led by Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, insisted there be no recess until the House had voted. Representative Mahon (Democrat), of Texas, said it would be "an outrage" if the House recessed without voting to lengthen the work week and "eliminate industrial graft and excess profits."

"We might as well settle that question in our own mind right now," said Cox. "Public sentiment is not going to let us go home until we do something with reference to the labor situation."

House Majority Leader McCormack said it was his wish that the House take a series of three-day recesses, after pending business is completed this week. He said the House cannot act on proposed labor legislation until the committee reports and there is no present indication when that will be.

Acting Republican Leader Michener asserted that in his opinion there was no likelihood of labor legislation unless it receives Administration backing.

The majority leader knows and I know there is no possibility of enacting legislation concerning labor as long as those charged with the war production program and the President take the position they do in reference to it," said Michener.

"I am not criticizing the position; I do not know. But when the representatives of the President come before the committee and insist that the legislation would be detrimental to the war program, it places the House in a rather peculiar position."

Michener suggested that McCormack contact Administration officials "and see if something cannot be worked out." His statement, in the role of acting minority leader, was the first broad hint that Republicans will not go along with any war labor legislation unless the Administration asks it, and accepts responsibility.

McCormack refused to agree with Cox that "this House could not take a recess prior to doing something with reference to the labor situation, without giving grievous offense."

"In certain sections of the country the people have certainly been given a lot of misinformation," said McCormack.

"As to the communities where there is an abundance of evidence of angry public opinion, I wonder if the gentleman would agree with me that aroused and indignant public opinion is because of the trickling in of a little of the truth rather than the dissemination of false information?" asked Cox.

McCormack called the question "hypothetical," but said that "one of the most vicious things is to compare the man who is working with the man in the Army who is getting $21 a month for the first four months."

McCormack said he once served in the Army at $30 a month, but that was no reason he should attack "a man who was married, with a wife and children dependent upon him. Such a man has responsibilities."

"He gets a larger salary," said the House leader, "but he has to pay his rent, he has to pay for his clothing, his food and everything else, not only for himself but for his wife and children. I think that is an unfair if not an odious comparison; yet it is one that is sold to the country."

Just before the House adjourned, Representative Mary Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, chairman of the House Labor Committee took the floor in defense of labor's war record and cited lengthened hours in vital war industries to show "that the so-called 40-hour week does not and never has restricted the number of hours worked." She charged that "certain groups" are attempting to arouse discontent "and to play the game that Hitler wants to play."

Connally's announcement that his "seize-freeze" bill will be called up in the Senate after the Langer vote was expcted to bring efforts to broaden its scope by amendments reviving labor measures held up in the Senate Labor Committee.

House Votes Police, Firemen Rises

aries up to 18 per cent.

Rises are essential now because of increased living costs, he declared.

In opposition, Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, cited these reasons for not granting increases now: Commissioner J. Russell Young has stated opposition to the bill; the increases are requested at a time when thrift and economy are necessary; living costs are going up, but the present salary rates can't be too bad, since the forces have lists of applicants as long as your arm; a precedent of raises will be started which can't be stopped—and where is the money coming from?" It is bad legislation for Congress to favor two departments of the District government and ignore employes of other departments.

The raises allowed for the Metropolitan police force are:

Captain from $3600 to $3800; lieutenant, $3050 to $3350; sergeant, $2750 to $3050; private, present original appointment at $1900 annually would be increased to basic pay of $2000 for the first year, with increases of $140 annually for five years until salary of $2700 is attained.

Increases in the Fire Department would include: Deputy fire marshal, $3000 to $3300; inspector, $2460 to $2760; captain, $3000 to $3300; lieutenant, $2840 to $3140; sergeant, $2600 to $2900; private, basic pay of $1900 raised to $2000 with $140 annual increases until $2700 is reached.

Representative Schulte's proposal to increase the tax on real and personal property here assessed at more than $7000 was commented upon favorably on the floor of the House yesterday as a means of boosting local revenues.

He said the present $1.75 per $100 tax rate is "the lowest real estate tax in the world," but added, "I don't think we should touch the little fellow who owns his own home. It's the apartment houses and the big properties that should pay a higher tax."

Representative Stefan (Republican), of Nebraska, ranking minority member of the District Appropriations Subcommittee, said he believes the subcommittee "should go into a huddle" with the District fiscal affairs subcommittee with a view to considering possible tax rate raises.

When the Appropriations Subcommittee takes up the District 1943 budget, probably next month, increases may be sought and it is probable that some means will have to be found to meet them, he said.

23 Torpedoing Victims Drift 11 Days at Sea

By the Associated Press

New York, March 23.—A crew of 23 men and 4 officers, who spent 11 days on the ocean in two rickety lifeboats after an enemy sub sank their ship, arrived in Brooklyn Saturday safe, well fed and, as one weary seaman said, "happy as hell."

They were survivors of a United Nations merchant vessel—shelled, machine-gunned and sent to the bottom on the night of March 5 off the Atlantic Coast. All crew members were picked up by a large general cargo ship 11 days later.

A United States Navy ensign authorized this statement by Jom Brevet, third officer aboard the ship, the sixty-sixth officially announced victim of enemy submarines off the Atlantic Coast since January 14:

"At 8:25 p. m. the night of March 5, I was on the bridge when we were attacked by shellfire. The sub machine-gunned us; the captain sounded the alarm bell and we put on full speed ahead on a zigzag course for ten minutes. After the captain sent out an S O S, the two boats, one of them leaky, went over the side. Then the sub fired a shell from 50 yards away and the ship rolled over.

"I jumped into the leaky boat; for 11 days we alternated in bailing out water. The two boats kept close together most of the time. The third day out we signaled a plane overhead. We got no answer. For a three-day period there was no wind. We were fortunate as to food—six biscuits a day, some milk, three cups of water, pork and beans.

"On the eleventh day, we saw smoke, and the ship picked us up. I guess we could have stood it for another three days—after that, no food."

Envoy Exchange Hits New Snag

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Negotiations for the exchange of diplomats between the United States and Japan which have dragged out for upwards of three months have encountered new obstacles, it was learned here today, with the Japanese desirious of appointing some of their diplomats to other posts instead of repatriating them, while they are also refusing to surrender American Marines captured in Peking and Tientsin at the time of the outbreak of war.

The American Government contends that the Japanese had no right to seize the American Marines in the legation quarter in Peking or in the International Settlement in Shanghai. Only a small number of Marines remained in these two points, the bulk having been withdrawn before the outbreak of war.

District Red Cross Will Use Dumbarton House for Duration

Historic Dumbarton House at 2715 Q Street Northwest, the refuge of Dolly Madison when the British sacked Washington in 1814 and thought to be Georgetown's oldest mansion, will be delivered over to use of the Red Cross tomorrow.

The property will be transferred by its owners, the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America, in ceremonies at the house at 11 a. m. The District chapter of the Red Cross will use the premises for the duration of the war. The N. S. C. D. A. has used the house since acquiring it in 1931 for national headquarters.

The rooms, shorn of old furnishings and museum pieces, will be used by the Red Cross for production work and classes, it was announced.

Mrs. Ethelbert I. Low, national president of the Colonial Dames, will make the presentation. Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer, chairman of the Red Cross, will accept the wartime present. The invocation will be delivered by the Rev. Dr. Freeland Peter, former canon of the National Cathedral. The address will be delivered by Miss Mabel T. Boardman, secretary of the National Red Cross.

Dumbarton was built around 1750 by George Beall, whose father, Ninian Beall, had the grant of land from the English King. He called it "The Rock of Dumbarton" because it resembled his home in Scotland. The house changed hands many times. It was called Bellevue when under the ownership of Charles Carroll at one juncture.

The committee arranging the presentation includes Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Joseph B. Hutchinson, chairman; Mrs. Hugh M. Morris, vice chairman; Miss Boardman, Mrs. Carter Glass, Mrs. Arthur C. Levering, Mrs. Harral Mulliken, Miss Agness Peter, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Mrs. Henry L. Stimson and Mrs. William Hollard Wilmer.

A number of national officers of both organizations will attend the exercises, it was announced. The society, it was pointed out, did war relief work in the Spanish-American War, in the last World War and has ben actively engaged in this conflict

Promotion Stunt Turns on Agents For John Golden

St. Louis, March 23 (AP).—When the producer of "Claudia" was preparing for the St. Louis opening of the play about a rather addle-brained wife, press agents conceived a promotion stunt.

To a list of prospective patrons came postcards from Chicago in feminine handwriting and bearing the following message:

"You must meet Claudia when she comes to St. Louis. She's the most fascinating girl in the world. John Golden will introduce you, I'm sure. In haste, Helen."

Today, Herman Goldwasser, a traveling salesman and recipient of one of the cards, filed a petition in circuit court asserting his wife read the card while he was out of town and began to suspect unjustly that "he was associating with and having clandestine meetings with other women."

He asked $2999 damages against Producer John Golden.

C.I.O. Chiefs Pledge 'Herculean Effort'

Delegates at Special Session Here Respond To Roosevelt Call to Defend Liberties

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Told by the President that they "dare not do less" than defend their freedoms by uninterrupted war production, a special C. I. O. conference yesterday responded with a promise of "herculean efforts" for victory in 1942, and indicated possible acceptance of suggestions for voluntary renunciation of double-time pay for Sunday and holiday work.

The appeal to suspend the Sunday double wage, made to the conference by War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson, was not answered by a direct resolution yesterday. But following Nelson's address C. I. O. President Philip Murray "assured" him that resolutions along the lines of his remarks would develop.

The meeting was called by Murray to combat the current Congressional sentiment for labor legislation.

Some observers expected the C. I. O. executive council, meeting here today, to approve abandonment of double-time for Sunday and holiday work for the war's duration.

The President's letter to Murray said:

My dear Mr. Murray:

In recent years the workers in America's great industries have gained new privileges and reaffirmed old rights. Today all of those rights and privileges are being tested by fire. If we lose this war, they and all the rest of our American liberties will be lost. Only victory can protect our freedoms; if the freedom of any of us is lost, the freedom of all is lost.

With rights and privileges go responsibilities. We are learning in the hard days of war what is sometimes overlooked in the easy days of peace; that liberty and freedom belong only to men and women who can earn them, and that none of the values which make life in America worth living can be retained except by people who will give everything and do anything to keep them.

This has especial point for organized labor—for its leaders and for the men and women in the ranks. Our free workers can give to victory far more than the Axis taskmasters can ever wring from the unwilling muscles of the regimented toilers of Europe and Japan. By the freedom they enjoy and the privileges they have won, American workers dare do no less than meet the new challenge of old slavery with courage, with energy and with a determination that nothing shall interrupt our country's march to victory over the Nazis and the Japs.

Very sincerely yours,
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

To the "extraordinary" session of several hundred union leaders, Nelson commended their action after Pearl Harbor in agreeing to relinquish their "basic privilege" of the strike.

But, he added, another privilege that must be suspended "to assure the preservation of those rights and privileges against the most serious threat they have met in this country," is double-time pay.

Admits Exceptions

He made it clear that he favored doubled payments if an emergency forces a man to work for the seventh day. But, he explained, in the drive toward factory operation on a seven-day, three-shift basis, when the worker's regular day off does not fall on a Sunday, and where the employe is therefore obliged to work on a Sunday, double pay is not deserved.

At the same time, in a guarantee which brought a sustained ovation from his audience, Nelson declared that despite the existence of persons who "would like to use this war situation to whittle down labor's rights and privileges . . . as long as I have anything to do with it, the war production job is not going to be used that way."

"I will not be a part of any attempt to use our need for increased production as a cloak to put something over on labor," he asserted.

In a resolution adopted later in the day, directed against the Congressional wave of sentiment for legislation to abandon overtime for work over 40 hours a week, suspend the closed shop in war industries and ban strikes, the conference declared that the current antilabor campaign "has been carefully planned and organized to stimulate a state of hysteria and panic in Congress and in the press."

Charges a Conspiracy

Commending Senators Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, and Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, for statements calling for an investigation of the agitation, the conference said:

"The evidence shows that this campaign has its source in a conspiracy against labor and the war effort originating in Oklahoma and Texas, in which a number of people and organizations have been led into the use of their names for pro-Axis expressions and activities."

In other resolutions, the conference went on record in favor of:

1. Wage increases to meet higher living costs and rising taxation.
2. Continuation of union security provisions in labor contracts.
3. Support of the joint labor-management councils in war factories, proposed by Nelson to further the production drive.
4. Continued cooperative efforts with the A. F. of L. in the President's combined labor victory committee.
5. Reaffirmation of the no-strike pledge.

The conference condemned anti-strike legisaltion as unnecessary and less available than the existing voluntary agreement for uninterrupted production.

Specifically, it denounced the pending Smith bill and efforts to abandon the 40-hour week as "a deliberate blow at the morale of American workers designed to destroy the unity of the American people in the victory program."

Jam Session

U. S. Housing Has Problem Housing Self

files papers in trailer's closet

There's a full-blown "jam session" going on in the Office of the Administrator, National Housing Agency, in the old red sandstone mansion at Sixteenth and I Streets Northwest.

Stenographers, clerks and officials are squeezed into the attic, crowded into the basement, packed in the stables, and have overflowed into the spacious garden where two trailers are parked serving as offices.

Inside the trailers clerks are working busily. Papers are filed in the linen closets and supplies are kept in orderly neatness in the drawers and cabinets beneath the tiny sink.

They are "real cozy," Marcella Hall, of Duluth, Minn., thinks. And she should know because she has been working in one for the past week and a half. She considers it quite an adventure.

Miss Hall left her home town just about 60 days ago, after finishing a business school course and getting three weeks' experience there as a typist. She admits Washington is not what she thought it would be, but hastens to add: I am really enjoying it the longer I stay."

The stenographic pool is located in the old stables of the mansion, over the garage. The two trailers are in the garden, surrounded by shrubs and trees planted long ago. A lone bird bath occupies a section of the garden which has not yet been put to more utilitarian use.

The two trailers—1000 have already been made and are in use by war workers—were acquired by the agency about three weeks ago as a loan from the Farm Security Administration. The loan was for six weeks and is about up. But it looks like the FSA has small chance of getting them back, according to one official.

Twelve persons work in the two units. In one are six people, six desks and six filing cabinets—not to mention the space used up in the closets, cabinets, etc.

The office of the administrator, National Housing Agency, has been in the building about six weeks. They were preceded by the Coordinator's Office of Defense Housing.

The old mansion, a well-known Washington landmark, was built by Lucius Tuckerman in 1886. His son once wrote describing it:

"He (Lucius Tuckerman) planned with entire success to combine homelike comfort with adaptability to entertaining. On the left, as one entered, was a reception room, where hung most of the family portraits. . . ."

Not any more.

War Hits Gondoliers

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), March 23 (AP).—Venetian gondola men, in dire straits because of the war, have been given 250,000 lira (nominally $12,500) by Premier Mussolini to repair their idle gondolas, a Rome announcement said today.

British Sailor Faces Inquest In Homicide

ber of the House Naval Affairs Committee, expressed the view of many Washington officials when he said last night:

"That was awfully bad taste that civilian showed in taunting the British sailor. If the British lad hadn't resented the insult to his service, he wouldn't have been worth his salt.

"I would expect an American sailor in England to do the same thing."

Maas, a Marine Corps flier in the World War and now a flying colonel in the Marine Corps Reserve, said he didn't like to interfere in a judicial proceeding in another State, but he expressed the hope that the Philadelphia coroner's jury would take all the factors into consideration.

On the eve of the inquest, the cables were bringing news of another triumph of the royal navy—the sinking of 11 Italian ships, including two submarines, within view "of the humiliated Fascists on the shores of Italy and Albania."

House-to-House War Bond Drive To Start in Va.

Richmond, Va., March 23 (AP).—Cooperation of Virginians in the defense savings program was urged by Gov. Colgate W. Darden, jr., today in a proclamation designating April as "defense savings month."

The Governor's proclamation follows in part:

"Whereas, the winning of the war effort will reouire the financial support of every Virginian to the extent of his ability to invest in Government securities and the Secretary of the Treasury, seeking to inventory the willingness and ability of our people to invest in defense savings bonds and stamps has instituted a victory pledge campaign, through which a house-to-house canvass of every residence in Virginia is to be conducted by volunteers under the direction of the Virginia defense savings staff, during the month of April;

"Now, therefore, I, Colgate W. Darden, jr., Governor of Virginia, do proclaim the month of April to be defense savings month in Virginia, and do hereby call on every Virginian to aid in this inventory by cheerfully receiving the volunteer, unpaid canvassers in this effort and by pledging to the extent of their ability to deliver such regular, systematic investments in defense savings bonds and stamps of the Treasury Department of the United States as their financial abilities will permit."

$1-Year Men Deny Blocking Wool Saving

Two War Production Board dollar-a-year men, accused by Robert R. Guthrie, resigned WPB textile chief, of having opposed curtailment and conversion measures for reason of private business interest, yesterday told a special House Military Affairs subcommittee that the charges were "absolutely false."

Both admitted to the committee, which is investigating Guthrie's controversial resignation, that they had had several differences of opinion with him; they insisted, however, that they had never opposed measures to curtail the supply of wool for civilian purposes, the major point of Guthrie's accusation against them.

Kenneth W. Marriner, head of the wool section in Guthrie's branch, and chief target of the charges of "insubordination," said he had, in fact, proposed curtailment orders which were vetoed as being "too drastic."

But Denies Shortage Existed

On the other tack, however, Marriner declared that there was no wool shortage for Army and Navy requirements.

Guthrie had said that a shortage existed and that his actions to meet it encountered opposition by business representatives in the WPB which led to his resignation.

Asked by committee members if the shortage Guthrie outlined really existed, Marriner replied:

"Positively not!"

He added that even without further imports, military requirements could be met by present stock piles and the yearly domestic wool clip until the end of 1944 on the worsted system and until the end of 1943 on the woolen system.

Without Civilian Usage

On questioning, however, he admitted this included no provision for any civilian supply, or for lend-lease purposes, and was based on the "current" rate of military procurement.

Asked if the picture would change on receipt of demands from Allied nations for woolen cloth, Marriner explained that the question of whether or not to meet them would have to be decided by "somebody higher up."

"We can't take those requirements into consideration until they hit us," he said.

Marriner, an official of a large wool processing and brokerage firm, admitted that he had opposed suggestions for mandatory blending of wool with other fibers for civilian use, but added that he had proposed blending on a "case by case" basis.

Many mills, he explained, did not have facilities for blending and would be forced out of business by a blanket blending order with the result that at some later date when the armed services needed their facilities, "about half the mills of the country would be shut down."

Asked about the situation in the WPB since Guthrie's resignation and the appointment of another acting chief of the textile branch, Marriner paused and then said:

"It's like sunshine after it's been raining."

Previously, A. J. Rice, an official of a large textile firm acting as textile consultant to the WPB, had testified that Guthrie's charges that he opposed wool conservation "has no foundation in fact."

Denies Withholding Data

He also denied the charge that he had withheld information on Army requirements from Guthrie.

"I have always given Mr. Guthrie's branch information on current procurement programs as soon as the services had decided themselves what they wanted to buy," he said. "I could not give Mr. Guthrie's branch information which was not in existence, or release military information until the services released it."

Earlier in the day, Cleon O. Swayzee, WPB labor division consultant on textiles, testified that one of "the most disturbing factors" in the wool conservation program was the "failure to provide for mandatory blending."

Swayzee, agreeing with Guthrie, said he thought the wool order for the first quarter of this year was "deficient" in failing to place an over-all limit on the amount of wool to be processed.

Policeman Is Shot By Street Brawler

Three Suspects, One Critically Wounded, Held After Roundup

Three persons, one of whom lay critically wounded in Gallinger Hospital, were held last night by police following the shooting earlier in the day of Private Frank H. Hoffman, 45, of the Ninth Precinct. The policeman was shot in the right thigh when his service revolver was wrested from him when he attempted to quell a street fight.

HOFFMAN

Hoffman, who before yesterday's shooting had been thrice wounded during his 17 years on the police force, was in Casualty Hospital, where his condition was said to be "satisfactory." A well-known former athlete, he resides in Edmonston, Md.

The wounded prisoner, who is a Negro, was shot about two hours after the street fight when he attempted to break away from Private E. C. Helms, of the Second Precinct, who, with a number of other officers, had been ordered to Fourteenth and T Streets Northwest on a tip that men involved in the shooting of Hoffman were in that neighborhood.

As the man was being placed under arrest, he tried to draw a revolver which Helms immediately knocked from his hand. In the ensuing brawl over the weapon, Helms managed to secure it and fired a bullet through the suspect's chest. The revolver, police said, was the same one which had been taken from Huffman and used to wound him.

Besides the wounded man, police quickly picked up seven more Negroes, including two brothers and a sister of the Gallinger patient, a second woman and three more men, one of whom was the cab driver who hailed Private Hoffman at 5:45 a. m. at the corner of Fourth and H Streets Northeast and told him he was afraid he was going to have trouble with his six passengers—four men and two women.

Hoffman instructed the cabbie to proceed with his passengers to their destination, 315 G Stret Northeast, and then proceeded to follow the taxi on foot. On approaching this address, Hoffman later told fellow officers, two men jumped from the cab and started fighting on the sidewalk.

Hoffman said he placed the pair under arrest and started to a nearby patrol box when a third man leaped from the cab and attacked the officer from behind.

In the ensuing scuffle, all three men teamed up against Hoffman and severely mauled him before one of his assailants grabbed his revolver while a fourth combatant, one of the cab's women passengers, attempted to pull one of the men off Hoffman.

The man with the gun, Hoffman said, commanded him not to move and then shot him as he was trying to get to his feet.

Burial Funds Found Safe In Closet

Anderson Powell, 78-year-old Negro whose blood pressure makes him feel he'll soon be in need of a funeral, yesterday blamed the same ailment for putting him in the embarrasing position of reporting a $500 theft which never took place.

"I can't hink," he said, "when I get that high-blood pressure. I forget."

And that, of course, is why Powell told police Sunday morning that someone had looted his trousers pocket of five $100 bills, which he had drawn from a bank Friday to take care of his burial expenses, when all the time the money was resting safely, if not conspicuously, in a little box on a closet shelf in his home.

A detective who visited him yesterday helped him find the money and the excitement was so great that Powell's heart started acting up again and he had to go take a nap to get his bearings.

But at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon he was back on his feet and able to tell a reporter that it wasn't going to hap en again. The money now is reposing in a safe deposit box in a local bank and Powell says he isn't going to touch it.

"I've notified the undertaker where he can find the money in case I keel over," Powell sighed. "All the arrangements are made and all they got to do is go to the bank and get the money."

Discovery of the $500 was good news also for a suspect picked up by police after the supposed theft was reported by Powell. The man in custody was immediately given his freedom.

Rev. Hahn Brooks, Street Preacher For 10 Years, Dies

The Rev. Hahn Brooks, who for the past ten years has been a familiar sight on Washington streets as he went from door to door preaching, died yesterday in his home, 1225 N Street Northwest.

He had been in a coma for three days, according to his caretaker-companion Mrs. Kathryn Mary El, 65, and had been bedridden for the past six months.

The aged minister was born in England, David de Guelph, and later changed his name after a revelation, Mrs. El stated. She said that he has healed hundreds of persons by laying his hands upon their heads. The Rev. Brooks was the author of a number of pamphlets and charts on Biblical subjects.

He leaves a son, Lionel de Guelph.

Mary E. Gibbs Dies

Mrs. Mary E. Gibbs, a resident of Washington for 27 years, died yesterday at her home, 1825 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, after an extended illness. Burial will be tomorrow at Oak Hill Cemetery, following 10 o'clock funeral mass at St. Paul's Catholic Church, Fifteenth and V Streets Northwest.

World's Loudest Noisemaker to Sound Off Tomorrow Following Siren Test Today

District civilian defense officials, frankly holding their fingers crossed about this afternoon's audition of 38 air raid sirens, will hear what is supposed to be the "loudest noisemaker in the world" tomorrow morning.

Officials from Norfolk, Richmond and Baltimore have been invited over to hear the air horn, developed in the Bell Telephone Co. laboratories. It will be sounded at 11:30 Wednesday, at the Capitol Garage, 1320 New York Avenue Northwest, and if it lives up to the advance reports, the officials should be able to hear it in Norfolk, Richmond or Baltimore.

A spokesman for the Office of Civilian Defense said that the horn, the only one of its kind, registered around 140 decibles; its only rival in the field of noise, it was reported, rated only 114 decibles. The horn has already been tested in New York and Detroit.

The 38 sirens which are to be set off this afternoon at 3 o'clock are of the electric type which have been tried unsuccessfully several times in the District. Although they are to be used only in case the main system of air and steam horns fails, officials hope they can be heard to some extent in every part of town.

Persons who do not hear the sirens this afternoon are requested to write (not telephone) to Capt. Herbert A. Friede, Room 312, Old District Building.

Film Will Show English War Life

Films of war life in England will be shown Friday night at 8:30 in the Interdepartmental Auditorium, Civilian Defense Director Lemuel Bolles announced last night. More than 1600 defense workers have been invited to see the picture, and hear an address by Bolles.

Raid Service For Pets Started

Inauguration of an Animal Rescue Service to care for injured and panic-stricken animals in the event of air raids through the cooperations of the District of Columbia Veterinary Medical Society, the D. C. Pound and all humane societies of the District will take place at O Street Northwest at 4:30 p. m. today.

The service, which is to be an auxiliary to the Civilian Defense activities of the Metropolitan area, has for rescue facilities, at the present time, 27 veterinarians, 10 animal ambulances, 17 animal hospitals and two trucks of the D. C. Pound.

THIS IS NO MILITARY SECRET—Lois Coots, a Parkersburg, W. Va., burnette, is enrolled with 80 flying cadets and enlisted men in the meteorology course at New York University's college of engineering. The course, sponsored by the United States Weather Bureau, in cooperation with the Civil Aeronautics Administration, was recently made available to women with a knowledge of physics and calculus who have completed the primary course in civilian pilot training and to women college graduates. Miss Coots, a graduate of Mariette College, will be assigned to a weather station upon completion of the course. Here she receives instructions from Fred W. Decker (left)

Mr. Weiner: That Manager Is Mad, Too

To Mr. N. H. Weiner, 551 Common Street, Lawrence, Mass.

Dear Mr. Weiner:

The Post has your letter complaining that you recently bought a "Made In Japan" leather covered collapsible telescope at the souvenir stand in Union Station here and we phoned the manager, who was astonished and said, We certainly don't want to sell that damn stuff."

You said I was astounded at this (the sale of Nip goods), especially in a city where every American citizen looks upon it as the shrine of American ideals and hopes."

Well, the manager of the stand said he had given specific orders on December 7 to the clerks to remove all Japanese goods from the counters until hearing further from him and the manager, F. L. Hitchinson. And he didn't show by tone of voice that they'd hear from him soon.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Weiner, he's as sore as you are.

"I went to Philadelphia last night with my wife and we bought a little trinket in a store near Spruce Street," Mr. Hutchinson disclosed. "Back home, I saw it was 'Made in Japan.' I felt like kicking somebody's teeth out," he said.

Even before the war, Mr. Weiner, Mr. Hutchinson had discontinued buying anything made in Japan, he said, because, I don't want to sell that junk. You put it on a counter and it isn't there five minutes before people fingering it have broken it up.

"I'd rather have American made goods, anyhow," he insisted.

Mr. Hutchinson went out immediately to see about those leather covered collapsible telescopes, Mr. Weiner. He said "I don't like that any better than does Mr. Weiner!" Those stands are as American as the bathing beauties on the magazine covers that hang around the counter. There's no doubt of it, Mr. Weiner. You couldn't fined a subversive influence there with two of those telescopes you bought or even hit one there by throwing that doo-dad Mr. Hutchinson bought in Philadelphia.

Yours,
SCOTT HART.

Blacking Out Institutions Will Cost D. C. Over $75,000

Between $75,000 and $100,000 will be necessary to equip District penal and charitable institutions with blackout material, Commissioner Guy Mason announced last night.

Mason told District Welfare Director Conrad Van Hyning that the funds would be allocated for this purpose from the Commissioners' one-million-dollar blackout appropriation.

The major project will be a $34,000 wire fence around Lorton Reformatory, whose farms and fields have always been unenclosed.

An auxiliary pump for the water system of the District Home for Feeble-Minded Children at Laurel, Md., will be installed.

Although Col. Lemuel Bolles, civilian defense executive, said that in general the blackout preparations of District institutions were "in very fine condition," some of them have been of great concern to civilian defense and welfare officials because of their proximity to military sites.

The Home for the Aged and Infirm for example, is constantly in the range of searchlights operated from Bolling Field, the Naval Research Laboratory and the Naval Air station. Inmates of the home have insisted on turning on lights during blackout tests, scratching black paint off the windows and using the sand buckets for various purposes unrelated to defense.

Mason cited Gallinger Hospital and the tubercular sanatorium at Glenn Dale as the most cooperative of all city institutions. The upper sections of all windows at Glenn Dale have been painted blackoutside and aluminum inside, said Mason in suggesting what steps may be taken by the other plants.

Mrs. Anderson, Of Takoma Park, Dies; Rites Today

Mrs. Mary Lawson Anderson, 64, 21 Takoma Avenue, Takoma Park, Md., a resident of the town for 20 years, died yesterday at her home after a two months' illness.

A native of Scotland before coming to Washington 32 years ago, Mrs. Anderson was active in the Daughters of Scotia. She had been financial secretary of the Washington Chapter. She was also an active member of the Washington and Montgomery County branches of Bundles for Britain. A member of the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, she sang in its choir for several years.

Her husband, Peter Anderson, survives. Funeral services will be held today at 3 p. m. at the Lee funeral home, Fourth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northeast. Burial will be private.

De Alvear Dies; Former President Of Argentina

Buenos Aires, March 23 (AP).—Marcelo de Alvear, 74, former President of Argentina, died tonight, less than two weeks after he ended a long eventful political career by resigning as national chairman of the "Union Civic Radical," Argentina's major pro-Democratic political party.

The former President's resignation, subsequently rejected unanimously by the national committee, came amid plans to reorganize the party as a result of its poor showing in the March 1 congressional elections.

De Alvear was President of his country during the prosperous 1922-28 era. The son of a distinguished Argentine family, he reorganized the Radical party after the revolution of 1930, but was forced to leave the country in 1931 when the Radicals were suspected of aiding an abortive revolt.

He returned in 1932 to become chairman of the party's national committee.

Four Army Fliers Killed in Texas

Odessa, Tex., March 23 (AP).—Four Midland Army Flying School fliers were killed today in the crash of their plane at a bombing practice target field 40 miles from the school.

Victims were: Second Lieuts. William M. Bolton, of Griffin, Ga., and Robert W. Ingle, of Mattoon, Ill., and Cadets William Talmadge Halstead, jr., of Lake City, Fla., and Oliver R. Harja, of Ironwood, Mich. They were the field's first casualties.

Mrs. Daley's Will Probated

The will of Mrs. Bertha B. Daley, of Glen Echo, which has been admitted to probate in the Orphans' Court at Rockville, bequeaths her entire estate to her husband, Preston C. Daley, and names him executor. The instrument, executed April 19, 1930, does not reveal the value of the estate.

Probe Asked Of Nazi Influence In Labor 'Curbs'

By the Associated Press

Representative Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, yesterday introduced a resolution asking an investigation of a charge by L. Metcalfe Walling, wage-hour division administrator, that the Nazi propaganda machine was behind the movement to set aside wage-hour standards.

The resolution said that if it appeared that Walling "is so ignorant of the well-known fact that the people demand labor legislation or that he is engaged in an effort to deceive the people or in an attempt to smear the opposition to the Administration's policy of extending special privileges to a certain group, he be called upon to resign or that he be removed by the President."

Pilot Bails Out in Va. As Plane Catches Fire

Norfolk, Va., March 23 (AP).—After catching fire in the air, a single-seat Army plane crashed and exploded in a Princess Anne County orchard yesterday, but the pilot bailed out before the crash.

The motor was buried in the earth, but only fragments of the rest of the plane were found where it came down.

The pilot, Ralph H. Baker, 23, suffered slight burns.

23 Draft Appeals Rejected

The report of the District Selective Service Board of Appeal announced yesterday disclosed that the board had reviewed 40 cases; rejected 23 appeals, approved nine, referred five—all conscientious objectors—to the Attorney General's office and returned three to the local boards for further consideration.

Indicating a tightening of policy in deferring men classified as necessary to essential industries, the board refused eight out of nine appeals of this type. Among those who asked for occupational deferment was Maynard F. Saunders, 31, a masseur. Officials at Local Board No. 9 would not say yesterday what reasons were given by Saunders to justify his claim for occupational deferment.

Appeals Listed

Hosea Bankhead Abernethy, employed at the Ordnance Depot, was the only registrant appealing from Class I-A to Class II-B which provides for men occupationally deferred, whose appeal the board granted.

Others whose appeals were rejected are: Harry T. Gaghan, blueprint and photostate operator; Arthur V. Meigs, field worker; Anthony W. Foe, contractor; Herman Lombard, tinnerman products; John M. Cauley, office of cost inspector, U. S. N.; Kermit Johnson, Civic Education Service, and William J. Fogel, Navy Yard.

Meanwhile, William E. Leahy, director of District Selective Service, announced another group of Washington registrants who will be inducted into the armed forces at Camp Lee, Va., today. The inductees and local boards from which they are being sent are:

Local Board No. 22
Russell Almon Baker, Harry David Diggins, Nathan Dubuer, Harvey Francis Ernest, Herman Hyman Goldstein, Raymond Price Hardesty, Ferdinand William Lange, William Vaughn Marsden, Clarence Eugene McClintic, Samuel Shulman, James Olan Skinner, Chester Taber Stephens, Lee Granville Wilson, Archie Morris Wood, Hiliam William Zeh.

British City Has One of Its Worst Raids

By the United Press

London, (Tuesday,) March 24.—German air raiders gave a southeast coastal town one of its worst bombardments of the war last night, launching what appeared to be a spring air offensive against Britain.

The raids, directed against the southern and southeastern coasts, were the heaviest against England in almost a year, and the southeastern town which appeared to be the main target was subjected to a vicious half-hour attack, according to reports from the coast.

Watchers along the coast at Folkestone said that British anti-aircraft batteries hurled up one of the heaviest barrages ever seen in that so-called invasion area and their sharp explosions mingled with the screech and low rumbling blasts from the German bombs.

The shopping district of the southeast town was pounded fiercely. Many business houses were reported wrecked, and it was feared the casualties might be heavy.

Observers from a neighboring town saw flashes light up the sky as bomb after bomb fell from the German planes. Meanwhile, other planes staged hit-and-run raids against other coastal areas.

It was reported that one German plane was shot down by antiaircraft gunners.

At one town the raiders ran into a group of home guardsmen testing explosives on maneuvers. The guardsmen were believed to have brought down one bomber in flames.

Bustanoby Dies At 69; Was Father Of Dinner Dancing

New York, March 23 (AP).—Jacques Bustanoby, 69, last of New York's famous turn-of-the-century restaurateurs, died yesterday.

Bustanoby, who started his career as a waiter shortly after he immigrated from France, introduced dinner dancing in his famous restaurant, the Beaux Arts, situated on Thirty-ninth Street.

He hired Rudolph Valentino as a dancing instructor at $10 a week to teach his patrons the tango. He started "Artists' Night," forerunner of modern celebrity nights, with Nora Bayes singing her "Shine On, Harvest Moon," with Blanche Ring chanting "Rings On My Fingers, Bells On My Toes . . ." with Fritzi Scheff contributing "Kiss Me Again." He retired during prohibition.

Man Is Shot During Barber-Shop Argument

Miles Wilson, 53, Negro, of 1020 Eighth Street Northwest, was shot in the right thigh during an argument in the rear of a barber-shop at 36 G Street Northwest yesterday afternoon.

Investigating officers from the First Precinct arrested Wilson's accused assailant and took from him a .32 caliber automatic revolver from which they said the serial numbers had been removed. Wilson was taken to Casualty Hospital, where it was said his condition was "apparently good."

Surprise

Court Fight Over Ewing Witness

Hearings on the plea for a new trial of Orman W. Ewing, former politician convicted in the District Court of raping a Government stenographer, were interrupted briefly yesterday by a court battle between Government and defense counsel for first chance to talk to still another "surprise witness."

The new witness, Miss Florence Steadman, is a waitress in a New York Avenue restaurant and lived in the rooming house at the time of the alleged rape. It is reported that she will testify that on the night of the alleged rape there were no outcries.

After Miss Steadman's name was mentioned, Ewing's new lawyer, James J. Laughlin, sought to interview Miss Steadman. But Assistant District Attorney John W. Fihelly was before him, and was already talking to her in his office.

Shortly after 4 o'clock, Laughlin presented a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, claiming Miss Steadman was unlawfully detained by Fihelly.

Justice David A. Pine ordered a hearing, which was held about 5 p. m. Fihelly declared that the witness had left his office and was free to talk to Laughlin if she wished.

Before the new witness was mentioned, Ewing and his son, Lowell M. Ewing, testified that the elder Ewing's rights were prejudiced by frequent disagreement between the defense lawyers when Ewing was on trial.

The hearing, with Miss Steadman scheduled to testify, will resume before Justice James M. Morris today.

Knox Commends Man Who Risked Life for Shipmate

Secretary Knox yesterday commended Ensign James Cowling Houghton, 23, of 2511 Davenport Street Northwest, for a heroic attempt to rescue a shipmate who was swept overboard from a destroyer in a North Atlantic storm last October 27.

HOUGHTON

Ensign Houghton, according to the announcement risked his life by swimming to the aid of Lieut. Charles D. Sooy, of Taft, Calif. Ensign Houghton succeeded in reaching the drowning officer, but the heavy seas broke his hold and Lieut. Sooy disappeared.

A graduate of the Naval Academy in 1941, Ensign Houghton is the son of Mrs. Milta Elizabeth Houghton. His father was the late Commander Houghton, of the Medical Corps.

House Votes to Let Barbers Set Closing Days

Through nine House votes a bill permitting District barbers to determine what day they shall close their shops yesterday rode to passage by a final record vote of 222 to 42.

The bill, sponsored by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, authorizes the District Board of Barber Examiners to fix opening and closing hours and one day a week on which shops will be closed on the basis of a referendum by local licensed barbers.

It further authorizes the proprietor of a shop to remain open on the day chosen for closing by the majority of ships, provided he proves that to remain open on the generally accepted day would conflict with the tenets of his religion.

Representative Schulte told the House, "Not a barber in the District has objected to this bill. They are for it 100 per cent."

Objecting to the form in which the bill was introduced, Representative Smith (Republican), of Ohio, offered an amendment not changing the effect of the bill though deleting any reference to religion.

"That amendment will sabotage the bill," cried Schulte. "It will kill the entire legislation."

In action by the committee of the whole House, the amendment was carried in three separate votes. Disbanding the committee, the House on a final roll call vote rejected the amendment, 170 to 117.

After voice and standing votes, which failed to carry the measure, a final recorded vote was taken and the bill passed.

Previously the House passed by unanimous consent a bill authorizing the District Commissioners to assign any officer or member of the District Police Force to duty as assistant chief of detectives and to be eligible for further assignment as chief of detectives.

At a meeting of the District Committee held earlier in the day Superintendent of Police Edward Kelly presented badges to the District Committee members making them honorary assistant superintendents of police.

Merrill Named To Head National Capital Campaign

Edward D. Merrill, president of the Capital Transit Co., was appointed chairman of the 1942-43 financial drive of the Greater National Capital Committee at a meeting yesterday at the Raleigh Hotel, it was announced by Edgar Morris, committee chairman.

Mack L. Langford, president of the Sanitary Grocery Co., was named vice chairman. All contributions to the drive, which opens May 1, are made voluntarily by Washington businesses. The campaign, carried on each year to finance the committee's activities, will be somewhat curtained this year in view of the heavy demands that have already been made on local businessmen, Morris stated.

District Company Penalized As Violator of Priorities

A Washington architect and construction firm were penalized by the War Production Board yesterday in the board's first action against building industry representatives on charges of violating priority regulations.

Matthew G. Lepley and the Stearns-Mishkin Construction Co., Inc., were deprived of priority privileges for a period of 11 months because, the WPB charged, the architect obtained priorities for vital materials as an agent for the company by falsely representing that the materials would be used to build dwellings exclusively for Government defense workers, each to sell for a price not to exceed the $6000 maximum allowed.

Some of the dwellings, the board said, had already been sold to others than Federal workers and ten units of one 36-unit project had brought prices of $6800 to $7750.

The construction firm may apply for suspension of the penalty gainst it in 60 days if it repays the purchasers the difference between $6000 and the price charged for the dwellings and complies with other conditions.

Lepley, a Washington architect of 30 years' standing, told The Post he had not been notified of the WPB order but was certain he was guilty of no violation and would carry the matter direct to Production Chief Donald M. Nelson.

Philip Stearns, president of the Stearns-Mishkin concern, said he was unwilling to comment on the order at the present time as the company, too, had received no notification of the order.

The dwellings in question are located in the Brentwood section of Northeast Washington.

War Housing

As the House Buildings and Grounds Committee completes its study of wartime housing needs in Washington, one fact stands out with unmistakable clarity. All of the city's home building facilities must be pressed into service to meet the overwhelming demands of war workers crowding into the city in ever-increasing numbers. With both public housing agencies and private builders doing their utmost, the supply of living quarters is still likely to fall far short of the pressing requirements.

There has been some suggestion at the hearings that a few members may attempt to eliminate the Alley Dwelling Authority from participation in this program. That would be a real tragedy for the city. The ADA is Washington's only public housing agency. It has had a broad experience in defense and war housing and is now engaged in building a large number of units for workers whose services are indispensable. Of course, it is the logical agency to direct the future public housing for war workers in the District. To assign that task to any other agency would be a criminal waste of experience and momentum in getting an essential war job done.

The ADA has done excellent work in the past in clearing hidden alley slums. Charges that it has exceeded its authority in this sphere are absurd. The chief regret of the community is that the ADA has been necessarily diverted from its slum reclamation task until the war is over. In the circumstances, however, the only logical policy is to press it fully into service in carrying out the terms of the Lanham bill, until the restoration of peace makes a further attack upon the slums practicable.

Certainly private industry should build as much of the new housing as it can. The ADA has followed a strict policy of deferring to private industry whenever it can do the job that ought to be done. But Congress should not lose sight of the fact that many war workers coming here cannot afford to pay the rents that private industry must charge to make a profit. Housing of all types must be given a place in the program, and it is imperative to use the experienced agencies which can get the quickest results.

Irish Dilemma

In a letter published in our columns on Sunday, Mr. Clarence Streit observes how wonderful it would be for all concerned—except, of course, the enemy—if the people of Eire should follow the example of the Australians and invite one of our generals or admirals to take charge of their island's defenses. It cannot be denied that, from our point of view, this would be a simple and admirable solution of the delicate problem created by the geographic situation of Ireland in relation to the Atlantic war strategy. However, the possibility that Prime Minister De Valera will issue any such invitation is exceedingly scant. He has made it plain that not until the hour of invasion has struck will Eire budge from her position of intransigeant neutrality. Nor is there any doubt that in this policy he is still supported by the great majority of his people, even by that very considerable number who have relatives fighting with the British forces. Nor is it possible to foresee any turn of events, short of invasion itself, that would cause any alteration of this attitude.

Thus it is for our own strategists to determine whether an effort by the Nazis to "outflank our Atlantic Maginot Line" by the seizure of Ireland could succeed against the present power of the British and American navies, the R. A. F. and the British and American land troops in Northern Ireland, plus, of course, the Irish National Army. It is also for them to determine whether the outcome of the war depends on our possession of sea and air bases on the west and southern Irish coast. If the answer in either or both cases is unmistakably yes, then the only rational move would be the forthright occupation of the bases with or without Mr. De Valera's permission. Meantime, we may be sure of two things: first, that Hitler will undertake no invasion by way of Ireland until he has good reason to assume that it will succeed, and, second, that no amount of scolding or exhortation from this side of the Atlantic is going to make Mr. De Valera change the policy to which he has adhered since the beginning of the war.

The Pot Simmers

The stepped-up Axis aerial assaults on Malta, the most heavily bombed area in the world, is but one of several straws in the wind presaging the possibility that the recent lull on the Libyan-Middle Eastern Front is nearing its end. Other recent developments pointing to the same conclusion are the intensified border skirmishes which have been taking place in Libya, the British naval and air attack on Rhodes, where large numbers of Axis troops, planes and ships were believed to have been concentrated for an invasion of Syria, and increasing naval activity in the Mediterranean.

According to Italian reports, a great naval engagement has been taking place off the North African coast, with Italian warships engaging a great British convoy. British reports, however, tell of the sinking by their submarines of two Italian submarines, two supply ships, six schooners, and a heavily laden transport. The boldness of the British attack can be gauged from the circumstance that the Italian losses occurred at the approaches to the Straits of Messina, between the southern tip of Italy and Sicily, and within sight of the Italian coast.

It is obvious that each Axis troopship and supply vessel sunk in the Mediterranean means that much less of a danger to the British forces in Libya. However, it is very likely that enough men and supplies have reached Libya from Sicily during recent months to make the outcome of the pending struggle in North Africa anything but certain. The one certainty is that Hitler will attempt to strike somewhere in the East, and Egypt—and the Suez Canal—is likely to be at least one of his objectives.

The chances are, in fact, that such a drive by Axis forces in North Africa will be accompanied by moves elsewhere—an offensive against the Red army and, possibly, an assault on British positions in the Near East with or without the accompaniment of an invasion of Turkey. At a time when all American eyes are focused on the Pacific it is well not to forget the Middle East. This is where fighting may soon break out, and no matter what happens elsewhere, that fighting would have a profound bearing on the outcome of the war. It is significant, therefore, that the British appear to be on their toes in the Eastern Mediterranean and are doing what they can to nip the Axis offensive in the bud.

Calling Sayre

Now that Commissioner Sayre is safely back in this country, he ought to tell us in as much detail as possible the story of the last three months in the Philippines from the civilian standpoint. Periodically, when there was little military activity to report, General MacArthur made a special point of issuing brief scraps of news about the Japanese treatment of civilians. He had neither the time nor the obligation to do more. But Commissioner Sayre now has the time and certainly the obligation to fill the gap in public information. We know literally nothing of what has happened in Philippine civilian life since Manila fell.

To be sure, there have been a few heroic statements, among them President Quezon's. Yet none of these has even begun to meet the demand for facts and for the "feel" of the situation as appraised by a responsible civilian. From all that can be learned, our military forces in the Philippines are pretty well informed as to what is going on in most of the areas controlled by the Japanese. And it is only reasonable to suppose that considerable civilian news has sifted through the enemy lines to the defenders. Some of this news surely can be revealed without giving aid and comfort to the enemy. Good or bad, moreover, it would help out on the psychological front, where the standing order of the day is attack.

Industrial Experiment

One of the chief criticisms of our industrial system is that there is not enough democracy in it. Donald M. Nelson's plan for joint labor-management war plant committees would be a step to meet such a criticism. To some industrialists the committees smack of a foreign importation. It is felt that they would be the thin end of the wedge of little soviets, syndicalism, or the corporative state. That is a jaundiced view to take of an experiment in industrial relations which might have socially as well as economically fruitful results.

The immediate object of these committees, of course, is to promote maximum production. Labor would pool its experience with management in improving techniques as well as in boosting production. That there is plenty of such experience upon which to draw was shown by the lead that labor took in pleading for the conversion of the automobile industry. Mr. Nelson sought yesterday to allay management suspicion as to the ulterior motives of the industrial councils. He said there would be no mixing up of functions in the new arrangement. Speaking to a gathering of 400 C. I. O. delegates, Mr. Nelson said that the committees were "not being set up to put labor into management or management into labor."

Yet out of the experiment might grow more mutual understanding as managers and workers talked around a table instead of across it. That will be helpful not only in winning the war, but also in winning a peace which will pose the problem of making the industrial system work better and more harmoniously.

False Economy

The cut of $118,000 in the appropriation for the Library of Congress which the House of Representatives has approved is a perfect example of the evil that may result when a laudable zeal for economy is divorced from any systematic plan. The library appropriation as recommended by the subcommittee was $173,000. This was in itself a decrease of $25,000 from the sum originally asked for. Now, with the budget reduced by another $118,000, the library is put in a position in which it cannot possibly fulfill its functions.

In support of his amendment to cut the library's appropriation, Congressman Dirksen remarked: "The amendment, if adopted, will save $118,000, and certainly the library facilities of Congress will not be impaired." This off-hand assurance will convince nobody who takes the least trouble to look into the matter. For the appropriation just voted by the House, the lowest since 1901, will be barely enough to enable the library to pay to keep its current newspaper and periodical files complete and will not leave a dollar over for the purchase of books. In other words, volumes which the library must have to be abreast of the times cannot be bought. That means that those depending on the library for accurate and timely information that may be indispensable for the successful conduct of the war—including members of Congress—will be deprived of essential tools.

It is to be hoped that when the appropriations measure reaches the Senate, that body will act with more discrimination and more understanding of the vital functions of the library.

Ultimate Reality

The other day there was an uncommonly depressing little item of news proving that this business of making the country air-minded has, indeed, got out of hand. The minds of first-graders, it appears, are to be utterly perverted by as noxious an innovation as was ever devised by the prophets of progressive education. Under the guise of teaching the young to think in terms of familiar elements, the heresy is now advanced that planes, rather than apples or jelly beans, should be the sample unit of measurement. Thus, for example, 2 planes + 2 planes = 4 planes, and so on.

There is no telling where this will end, for it is nothing less than a slavish imitation of the Nazi educational technique. Little Nazis, you know (big ones, too, for that matter), take no notice of how many miles it is from Berlin to London or New York. Their teachers make them think of the distance in terms of how long it takes a Junkers transport plane to make such hops. So revolution is clearly upon us, if we, too, embrace this method of air-conditioning.

We understand that, among others, Robert H. Hinckley, Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Air, has publicly supported the method—which just goes to show that the conspiracy reaches right into the Administration. For our part, we shall continue to insist before the appropriate authorities that a row of apples or a handful of jelly beans have more immediate reality for the first-grader than all the bombers the Glenn Martin plant can turn out working 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

SHE LOOKS HOMEWARD

Here in this grand America spring comes slow
To the northern towns, one wee bud at a time
You'd say—and tight as knots! the snow flies late,
And sure! I'm longing for a kinder clime.

It's dreaming I am of Ireland in the sun,
The green sod glowing and me a gerl there,
With me father's fields of flax coming to flower
In a glen of Donegal, in the soft air.

Like a landlocked sea with the blue of me mother's eyes
They were—a thing the memory sets apart;
When the wind blew over thim and the shadows of clouds,
The flow of their waves was a sight to stop the heart!

I'm telling you so! I could cry my eyes out, now!
For what I'll not be seeing more, Ah! never:
The flowers of the flax blowing in the fields at home,
That are blowing and flowing over me heart forever.

GRACE CLEMINTINE HOWES.

On Criticism

We are told that the man who criticizes the Government is unpatriotic. That is not so. Those who criticize because of past defeats, which cannot be remedied, are in truth unpatriotic, but those who offer constructive criticism in an effort to prevent future defeats are doing a useful thing. Most of our present difficulties exist because of our national habit of locking the stable door after the horse is stolen. This war has just begun. If we can do a little locking of stable doors before it is too late it would seem to be a wise thing to do.

Congress has just increased the national debt limit to 130 billions of dollars. Even that stupendous sum will not be a drop in the bucket unless we stop the terrific leaks in the national Treasury. Mr. Average Citizen is told that he cannot know what is going on inside governmental circles and that he ought to be patriotic enough to keep quiet and trust to the wisdom of the Government officials charged with the conduct of the war. But when Mr. Average Citizen reads that the Arthurdale project cost the taxpayers $2,697,157 and that the Government is trying to dispose of it for $175,000; and when he reads that Greenbelt has an operating loss of $400,000 to date; and when he reads that millions are unnecessarily spent annually in de luxe travel expenses for all sorts of Government employes, he begins to take notice.

And when he realizes that the people who backed Arthurdale and Greenbelt and a thousand and one other like projects are the same people who now preach the doctrine that it is wise to take the money derived from defense bonds to hire teachers of dancing, coordinators of bowling, badminton, etc., etc., he is not convinced of the soundness of their judgment. If they were wrong before and have cost the taxpayers billions, they can be wrong again and they should be stopped now. We have no billions to waste. Japan is not directing her energies in any such fantastic directions. She is right down to business and so should we be.

Any man, or woman either, who has brains enough to teach dancing or bowling or anything else can learn to operate a stamping press or a drill press or to pack ammunition or do other actual war work. Let's stop frittering away our substance. MONITOR

Local Heroes

Next to Gen. MacArthur, the greatest hero today is the Government employe. I mean the one who has broken up his home and come to Washington from hundreds of miles to take a job on a salary that allows him a living just one degree above starvation.

Stranger in a strange city, confronted with hard circumstances, he is forced to house his family in two by nothing rooms—because he can't afford better ones—share his household utilities, kitchen and bathroom with half a dozen others, and face the future with uncertainty. This is the forgotten man today. Yet in the face of all these hardships, he is as loyal to his job as the soldier is to his general, executing cheerfully every duty he is assigned. If Uncle Sam took care of him with the same devotion he shows Uncle Sam, they both would be infinitely happier. OBSERVER.

Washington, March 18.

Port Of Havana

By using the port of Havana, there will be no shipping losses effected by enemy submarine attacks while transporting goods from this port to the near ports of Florida in properly guarded convoys, as this trip can be covered by daylight in one day.

As our man power becomes worn down by the ravages of war and we are compelled to draw more and more on farm laborers for military services, since they are less skilled for service in industrial employment, this will bring about food shortage. In the production of sugar, owing to favorable climatic, land and other conditions, each Cuban laborer can displace several American laborers in the same line of production.

The island of Cuba can produce all the sugar consumed in the United States and at a lower cost than it costs the American producer, thereby liberating hundreds of thousands of American laborers employed in this industry to serve in the military defense of our country. Also, Cuba can produce important minerals and other products necessary for the successful pursuit of the war. All of these products can be transported over the Cuban railroads and highways to the port of Havana and from there shipped to the near ports of Florida, where these products can be reembarked by rail to all parts of our country, thus avoiding the shipping losses entailed when using the eastern ports of Cuba to ship products to the Northern ports of the United States. Vacant Lodgings

As to dormitories, why not use available structures first? There are in the 1700 block of I Street, a stones throw from the White House, three large old private houses that have been vacant eyesores for many years.

One was the residence of the late Chief Justice Holmes and is four and a half stories high and seems to be in excellent condition. The other two are connected and are for sale, but if the President has the power to take over people's homes surely the same rule could be applied to vacant houses—and we who live in crowded quarters without spacious grounds or air conditioning need all the park space to woo the vagrant breezes in the summer. Fifth Column

A vote of thanks for Roscoe Drummond's article of March 14, designated as "Our Fifth Column." He has helped to clear the terrain by his fearless cross-section analysis of subversive activities. The import of his initial paragraph "The U. S. is the only belligerent in World War II wittingly harboring an active, aggressive Fifth Column movement" cannot be lost on a determined people. Mr. Drummond has primed true Americans how to think and act amid the abuse of free speech. The greatest support that can be given our Commander in Chief and our fighting men is an alert civic population, aware of what is going on—it becomes a formidable rear guard.

Inside Germany

In your issue of March 20, Mr. Otto Strasser presented quotations from a report said to have come from somebody holding a high position "in the department of economics, at Berlin" to indicate that the Hitler System is ripe for collapse. Mr. Strasser opened his article by saying "Much of my writing since I came to America has been based on first-hand information from Germany."

I am not questioning Mr. Strasser's purpose in making public the information which has come into his possession nor the authenticity of the information he has conveyed, although I find it hard to believe some of it. However, I can see clearly the danger to our war psychology and military strategy which can be caused by our believing that the Hitler System is about to collapse from within. For believing this, we might be led into changing our military plans on false premises and relaxing our war efforts.

Much of the quoted information about internal conditions in Germany is of the obvious type, particularly to persons who know something about the German economy, or at least, about any war economy. Shortages of food and other supplies and consequent disorders are to be expected. Opposition from certain minorities to the ruling party even in wartime is not unusual.

We must recognize, however, that oftentimes the claim of a minority about the progress of its program is exaggerated. This is particularly true in the German totalitarian state today where membership in a minority insurgent group, such as the Black Front, is punishable by death. Under such conditions, any little amount of success would loom huge to its members as they tend to have a worm's-eye view of their accomplishment. For instance, I cannot convince myself that the soldiers of Germany "have all lost their enthusiasm for warfare." Nor can I subscribe to the view that in our victory in this war, military action will be secondary to a revolution in Germany as determining factors. TRANQUILINO ACQUINO.

Overtime

I am definitely opposed to cutting out all overtime. This is why; my husband and millions of others like him, are working on defense projects and their daily earnings are between 50 and 65 cents per hour. If they are not to be paid overtime for extra hours, their average earnings per week will be $26.00. How, will someone tell me, are they to be expected to pay prevailing rents, give their families the necessities, such as medical care and proper food and clothing at the prices they are sold for today? Can you, by any stretch of the imagination or by any well-prepared budget, conceive of doing all this here in Washington or surrounding towns in Maryland and Virginia, on $26 per week? The average rent here is $50 per month for a small apartment, where one may be allowed to have dogs or cats, but not—mercy, no!—not children. There are thousands of people in this predicament and I am sure they will raise their voices in condemnation of cutting out the 40-hour week, unless something is also done to provide them with homes and food at prices to meet their wages.

If Congress, the President, and our other leaders in the Government want to see that Mr. Average Man and his family are taken care of, they will do well to start right here in their stamping grounds. Let them look under their very noses if they want to see the atrocious rise in the cost of living. HOUSEWIFE.

The Post Impressionist

"The Boat"

All County Durham rejoiced at the launching of the Walrus on June 21, 1935. It is important to mention the year, as it took James Tilden Straker seven years to arrive at this point.

The sun shone brilliantly, for this was no ordinary launching. The Straker family and many Straker cousins stood on the quay side anxiously peering at the suspended vessel. This was the final moment for which the owner and maker had labored seven long years, and from which he could not now escape. Their hearts beat for him. Their faces portrayed strain and the chill of an early June morning, and when Harriet said fatuously, "Well, it's a fine day, anyhow!" everyone knew what she was thinking and forgave her. They felt that way themselves.

Supposing, just supposing that the Walrus were not to float! Just supposing she keeled right over! Just supposing she sank! What then?

You see, James Straker hadn't any business building a boat. His business was coal mining, and he lived in a large house in the very heart of the country, 25 miles from the sea. But he was always walking up Peters Bank to look with his very blue eyes at the blue strip that was just the sea.

One day he walked down the hill to the tea table and said, "What's it to be—a caravan or a boat?"

A caravan would have suited quite two-thirds of the family very nicely, but they all knew that it would have to be a boat, so they said so.

The servants were nearly demented trying to get the dining table to set it for dinner. James was always hanging ardently over it, his plans tacked skillfully down on the "rough spots." One small child had usually been captured to hold a curved stick just so, while James drew and talked absently with his pipe between his teeth.

"I think . . . puff . . . that that . . . ought . . . puff . . . just a-bou-t . . . puff . . . to do . . . the trick."

No room was big enough for those plans. Plans of the keel, the ribs, the sails, the cabin—everything, and all invented by James, all calculated and drawn by him during those short evenings after work.

Then he was ready to start building. He commandeered a shed at the bottom of the yard that was once a garage, a workshop and a stable. Knocked into one, it was just the right size, and the work hastily began to go forward.

Excited lorries came rumbling up the drive, to the everlasting delight of the children, and pieces of choice wood were unloaded, along with queer shapes of metal.

People who came to see the family almost always inquired after "the boat" before anyone else, and while few really feared for James' sanity, many thought that all this activity down at the bottom of the yard would come to naught. Their half-amused smiles said so, but James was not irritated. And, of course, the boat was the piece de resistance, and was now always shown, even before the rose garden.

Then one day the family was thrown into a dreadful turmoil. The keel, the great oak keel, the very heart of the boat—had warped. The children were running up and down the yard bearing kettles of boiling water, while James straddled the sick lump of wood and soothed it with water-soaked compresses. For several days he had his meals down in the shed and stayed away from work. Catastrophe was averted, and the work went forward again.

The ribs came into place.

"Ah!" he would say, as he locked the doors lovingly and slipped into his jacket. "We have the skeleton now, and that's something, my lad!"

The lad in question was by this time very weary, hungry and cross, but he couldn't have shown it—it would have been like telling the Archbishop of Canterbury you didn't believe in God.

The garden went on flowering the way English gardens do. The snowdrops and daffodils, the crocuses, the laburnum and the rhododendrons, the lilac and lavender, the roses and sweetpeas, the dahlias and Michaelmas daisies. Seven summers came and went and the Walrus was finished by the eighth.

That night the youngsters couldn't sleep. They would ride down to the sea in the cabin of the Walrus at 4 in the morning. Twenty-five miles in the cabin of the Walrus, mark you, and no mistake!

All night long men labored in the yard. Flares and torches showed in the dark, lighting up some face intent on the birth of the Walrus. It was as if she were in labor. Her time had come, and now she must be taken from the shed and jacked onto the lorry. Voices echoed over the cobblestones all night long. The youngsters could not sleep.

When morning came the whole household had scarcely been to bed, and there was a curious excitement about them all, a sort of fearful expectancy. None of them, except, of course, James, knew anything about sailing, and cared less, yet this was as much their day as it was his. Had they not watched him struggle with the boat all these years . . . it would be a terrible thing for James . . . if . . .

A bottle of the best champagne, flowers for Mom—Mom secretly quaking with fright lest she bungle the christening—these were all things to be remembered that dark June morning. But at last there was nothing more to be done. The Walrus must say goodby forever to the cornfields and the orchard and the pear tree which hung over the shed.

The youngsters, bundled into the cabin, and slowly the steam lorry set off down the drive. She was going. She was going down to the sea. She rounded the bend. She was gone.

Ah! It was strange to see the country through portholes. To rumble through the town and see the familiar shops through portholes!

That night in the restaurant the family sat and ate. Soft music reached their ears. Waiters came and went and attended to their needs. They sighed. They rested. They dwelt on the events of the day in jerky monosyllables, for the Walrus had not sunk. She had floated gloriously in the pale morning sun, listing only a little to one side, as she was to do later after her trip to Dunkirk and back.

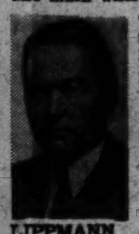
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Struggle To Mobilize

THE LABOR leaders, like the automobile manufacturers before them, will be much happier and also much wiser men when they quit trying to swim up Niagara Falls. They have not yet made up their minds that war and nothing else is now their business in life. There is no use their crying out that they are under attack from the impractical and from labor-baiters and fascists. From every private interest that has had to undergo conversion to war, the same kind of cry has gone up. As late as last December those who demanded a shutdown of the civilian automobile business were met by planted publicity that the campaign for conversion was being conducted by men who did not understand industry and were under the inspiration of communists.



LIPPMANN

To be sure, the enemies of business joined in the agitation. Corporate industry was in an untenable position, and its enemies made the most of it. Labor unions are now in an untenable position. The enemies of labor are making the most of it.

THE ONLY possible answer is for labor to get out of its untenable position and, like Detroit, to go to war. This is not a mere matter of labor leaders modifying their demands, conceding this or that point when the heat is too intense. It is a matter of a radical change in their whole approach—a change which will cause labor leaders to convert the machinery of labor organizations to war production.

It will be said, of course, that this cannot be done. Three months ago it was said that Detroit could not be converted. But now Detroit is being converted, and the machinery that could not be converted has been parked outside of the plants, wrapped in paper, and left there for the duration. The same conversion can happen, must happen, and will happen to the labor union machinery. The union practices and the union leaders that cannot be converted to war production will be parked outside the plants, wrapped in paper, perhaps legal paper—and left there for the duration.

THE CONVERSION of the unions will take place, as has the conversion of the corporations, by the combined pressure of patriotism, reason, and sheer necessity. When there was no more rubber and no more steel for private automobiles, the proposal to convert Detroit to war use seemed much more practical, and finally positively attractive. There are no happier civilians in America, and soon there will be no more popular civilians in America, than the plant managers who are making the industrial miracle of Detroit.

The labor leaders stand now just about where corporate executives stand when any industry is ripe for conversion. They are under tremendous popular pressure. They are worried and unhappy, goaded by their own patriotic feelings. They are about to be deprived of the means to carry on their business as usual.

THIS WILL not in the main be brought to pass by laws that "freeze" and put "ceilings" and "outlaw." There may be some laws of that sort. In the main the conversion of labor unions will be brought about by the general mobilization of man power through the selective service machinery. This will affect labor unions and labor leaders very much as the system of priorities and allocations of materials is affecting private corporate business.

As every adult person is registered, classified, and made liable for the national service wherever he is most needed, there can be no such thing as a strike. For the striker will be a man who has left his post of duty and is absent without leave. Either he goes back to his post or he is reclassified for another post. In time of war, when there is universal service, no one resigns without permission. There are rewards and promotions for good service. Because of the stern fact that service is compulsory, the inducements for good service are more effective in that the alternative of not serving at all is ruled out.

UNDER THIS system, which is now certain to come rapidly into operation, there disappears the ordinary business of labor unions, —a business which is based on a monopoly or at least on a dominant control of the labor supply in particular plants or industries. The real question for the labor leaders will then be: Will they stand aside, protesting and complaining, while Gen. Hershey and the selective service organization take charge of the mobilization of man power, or will they convert the union machinery to an active and leading part in this mobilization?

If they stand aside, they will not only find themselves pushed and left aside but they will prepare a very bad future for the kind of labor unions they represent. For the more men there are who go to war, the more men there will be to hold the civilians at home accountable for what the civilians do during the war. Wise businessmen saw in December that there was no future for them, or for the system of free capitalism, if they did not prove to the country, and particularly to the fighting men and their families, that they could play an indispensable part in winning the war. I tremble to think what will happen to labor leaders, to labor organizers, and to the deferred workers, if the soldiers who do not have enough weapons come back and find that people at home are comfortably fat and prosperous. The rumble of the popular discontent from all over the country today is a mere squall as compared with the storm that will blow up if those who stay at home do not go seriously and fully to war.

WE SHALL do well always to bear in mind, I believe, that there is no peculiar and separate "labor problem." What we call the labor problem today is merely one aspect of the general problem of mobilizing the whole nation, of converting a civilian society into a nation dedicated to waging war. Thus we have gone a fair way, but by no means all the way we can and must go to converting industry to war; whatever the personal details of the Guthrie affair, for example, the underlying truth is certainly that there is still some resistance among businessmen and that there is still some indecision in Mr. Nelson's organization when it comes to mobilizing business.

The same resistance to mobilization is only too evident in the departments of the Government which do not have a direct part in the war. They still occupy office space and use up clerical forces on a lush prewar scale of abundance. They are conducting their business very much as usual, and the effective way to deal with this situation is, I believe, to do what the Baltimore Sun did this week when it spotted the machine tools being hoarded by the National Youth Administration—that is to say, to insist that all these surplus facilities be converted to war purposes.

Senator Byrd would make more headway, I feel sure, if instead of campaigning for "economy" at a time when the budget figures are unintelligible, he went after the facilities which the money represents—the buildings, administrators, clerks, typewriters, card indices, filing cabinets, telephones, etc., etc., which could be requisitioned and converted for waging the war.

Filipinos Abroad

By Ernest Santos

Loyal To America

WHAT contributions are being made by the over 100,000 Filipinos in the United States, Hawaii and Alaska toward America's war efforts? Far from being apathetic and smug and complacent, Filipinos in this country, according to Manuel A. Adeva, are "doing everything they could to help win the war."

On December 8, the day immediately following the treacherous bombing of Pearl Harbor, a delegation of Filipinos presented themselves at the War Department with the object of volunteering their services to the United States Government. Unfortunately, by some strange quirk of fate which made Filipinos aliens in spite of their allegiance to the United States flag, their offer was rejected on the grounds that—to use Secretary Henry L. Stimson's words—"under our present law a person who is not a citizen of the United States may not be commissioned or enlisted in the Army." However sympathetic were the United States officials to this Filipino willingness "to join us in a common cause," their hands were bound by official red tape. Undaunted by this rebuff and advised that "a change in the law will be required if Filipinos who are not citizens are to be permitted service in the armed forces of the United States," the Filipinos promptly solicited the aid of their energetic resident commissioner, J. M. Elizalde, to have the law amended.

THESE Filipinos—most of them with large families to think about—could easily have escaped military service inasmuch as the existing law itself excludes them from being drafted or inducted. This circumstance alone was a perfect set-up for the would-be slackers. All they had to do was sit and wait until called to the colors. But, no. Of course as with exceptions to every general rule, there are some—not many—who felt otherwise. For example there are few in the Federal service who are reluctant to leave their soft clerical berths but who nevertheless have been the most vociferous about their patriotism at Filipino rallies. And there are others who tried to evade their duty by seeking employment in what can be considered essential war industries. If they had been trained technical men, there would have been no objection. After all, what is desired is to win this war. To most Filipinos, however, the antics of these people are not only deplorable but pathetic. For they show at best that many of these men who recite their Patrick Henry's with astonishing rapidity are nothing but windbags.

Fortunately a majority of Filipinos—say nine out of ten—feel that this war is one chance in a lifetime to show the whole American people that they are loyal and grateful for the kindness and hospitality which were vouchsafed them by this great country. Perhaps some of them still remember, although dimly at that, the common Tagalog adage handed down to them by their forefathers: "Ang taong hindi maalam magbayad ng utang ng loob ag taong hindi maaring pakinabangan." (A person who is unwilling to acknowledge and pay a debt of gratitude is a person who is good for nothing). Certainly they have not the least desire to be called ungrateful.

A Rockefeller Foundation fellow, Dr. Francisco Dy, who is presently taking graduate courses at Johns Hopkins Hospital at Baltimore, chafed and wailed: "I was born under the American flag; why wouldn't the American people allow me to fight for the preservation of the liberties symbolic of that flag?" His bewilderment and his impatience were characteristic of the opinions expressed by the large group of Filipinos in this country.

Frank A. Reyes, of the New Orleans Filipino community, wired Commissioner Elizalde: "I wish to render my services both to the Philippine and to the U. S. Governments in any capacity you may deem best for me to serve. Filipino community here at your disposal. Please wire instructions."

From Ketchikan, Alaska, the Filipinos radioed: "Countrymen here agreed in a mass meeting to help and support the U. S. Government. We are boycotting everything Japanese."

From Los Angeles they communicated: "Islanders here pledged 100 per cent loyalty and support to the city, State and national governments of the United States in the present emergency."

In almost every Filipino community throughout the land the same sentiment prevailed. As the war dragged along, they flooded the commissioner's office with communications, all bearing the same tune: "Local draft boards turned down our services. Please amend the National Selective Service Act."

It was through their insistent desire to serve that Commissioner Elizalde worked and finally prevailed upon the Seventy-seventh Congress—with the full cooperation of President Roosevelt and War Department officials—to pass Public Law 360, which now makes it "possible for Filipinos to serve in the Army of the United States." Immediately following this passage, Filipinos—students, professional men, factory workers, cab drivers, household and restaurant help, seamen, agricultural workers, etc.—all flocked in never ending stream to their respective local Selective Service boards for induction into the Army.

ONLY a few days ago the War Department announced the formation of the first Filipino Infantry battalion, with headquarters at San Luis Obispo in California. As contemplated, this battalion, the creation of which should be credited to the indefatigable efforts of Col. E. Z. Lawhon (G-1), Maj. Eugene L. Harrison (aide to the Secretary of War), and to Lieut. Col. Courtney Whitney (Air Corps), will be officered by Filipinos themselves whenever feasible and sent to the Philippines at the earliest opportunity when conditions warrant safe dispatch.

Those Filipinos who are incapacitated for service due to overage and physical disabilities are doing their bit by volunteering to their respective civil defense groups and by pledging themselves to buy United States defense bonds every pay day. Others have held benefit dances and community affairs for the sole purpose of raising funds for the American Red Cross. The Filipino taxi drivers in the District of Columbia had over a month ago raised several hundred dollars, which they turned over to the local chapter of the Red Cross. In New York City they helped swell the "A Bomber a Day for MacArthur" campaign fund. Still others, who, like engineers and chemists, by training and qualifications are deemed essential for the production of America's war arsenal, have volunteered their services to the United States Government with or without compensation.

Verily it can be said that Filipinos in this country "from the very beginning have been conscious of their responsibilities in this struggle."

Turkish Neutrality

By Maurice Feldman

Guarding The Strategic Dardanelles

THE POSSIBILITY of Japan's ruling the Indian Ocean and Germany's shifting the preponderance of her operations toward the Suez Canal and the southern part of the Eastern Front have become, during the course of this war, more and more feasible. Germany's intention is to deal a decisive blow against the Suez Canal and secure contact with the countries occupied by Japan. The next step of the German spring offensive seems also to be aiming at the oil fields of the Caucasus and Transcaucasus. A German advance as far as the Caspian Sea would not only cut off Russia from the most vital supply lines of her oil fields, but also from the shortest way Anglo-American supply might reach her coming from the Orient.

With the possible change of scene of war to the Black Sea, various problems have become acute which, so far, had been more or less neglected.

First of all, the attitude of Turkey. If the new, direct battle front between the United Nations and the Axis machine is to be there, reaching from India to Egypt, Turkey becomes the last and natural barrier lying between the two opponents and is, therefore, likely to be overrun if the belligerents do not choose to have one flank exposed to uncertainty. From the point of view of the defense of the United Nations and Turkey, the question of free passage through the Bosporus and the Dardanelles has again been brought into the spotlight. The actual danger exists that Italian and German naval units enter the Black Sea through the Turkish Straits. Every report mentioning mass mobilization in Bulgaria and concentration of strong German fighting units in Bulgaria points toward Germany's policy to get control of the Dardanelles one way or the other. An advance of the German army through Anatolia to the Caucasus seems rather improbable in military circles of England and Russia on account of the difficult and unpopulated terrain through which they would have to pass.

IF THE NAZIS succeed, by force or peaceful means, in obtaining the right of free passage through the Straits of the Dardanelles and the Hellespont, they will have found a new way from the Adriatic Sea through the Gulf of Corinth to the Black Sea beyond any control of the United Nations. Only when uncovering these plans does the huge sacrifice in men the German high command so willingly made in order to conquer Crete becomes understandable, since the whole development so far has shown that Crete can hardly serve as a jumping board for German operations against Alexandria in Egypt or Cyprus and Syria. The naval units of the Axis are much too small to enable an attack by sea, and air attacks are hampered by the great distances of the sea. However, the achievement of the German army in Greece and Crete can gain full meaning as soon as the Hellespont and the Dardanelles are opened to naval units of the Axis powers.

So far Turkey has not seemed to be willing to yield to any overtures of the Fascists. According to a report coming from well informed Turkish circles, the country is ready to stiffen her attitude in this question. Turkey, the report says, is decided to acknowledge only strictly neutral countries.

Therefore Bulgaria is not any longer considered neutral. The change of flags of many ships for the duration of the war is not being recognized by Turkey, either. Further, no war material of any kind is to be shipped through the Hellespont. Only very small boats of fewer than 100 tons may pass on their own risk without a pilot. Ships of more than 100 tons are thoroughly examined before passing, and only after a rigid check-up of their cargo they are piloted through the straits. Ships that were registered as auxiliary vessels to the fleet at the outbreak of the war, or those that were changed into such since, do not obtain permission to pass. Such a strict attitude of Turkey would necessarily render all the plans of the Fascists for an attack on Russia from this side illusory. However, since the Bosporus and the Dardanelles gain more and more importance for the Nazis while they try to advance on land along the Black Sea at the same time, this question will become acute within the nearest future.

IN ORDER to reach the oil fields, the Third Reich needs unrestricted supremacy over the Black Sea.

The responsible leaders of the Turkish foreign policy are well enough aware to realize the dangers threatening Turkey. In all questions of foreign policy they endeavor to follow the principle of preserving well balanced and strictest neutrality. This policy is naturally due to slight fluctuations. It is clearly noticeable in the change of attitude towards Russia. Russia had been the first to recognize the government formed by Kemal Ataturk and has supported the independence of Turkey ever since, which consequently brought the two countries very closely together. The Russian-German pact of August 23, 1939, followed a considerable cooling of relationship and shortly afterwards an understanding was reached with Great Britain and France in signing the Ankara pact. This pact constituted a valuable alliance for the Allies as well as for Turkey towards reciprocal safety for the first 15 months of the war. The Turkish government, declaring herself non-belligerent, openly defined her position towards Germany and wide circles hoped for an early victory of the Allies. After the collapse of France, the defeat of Greece and Crete, the long and hard struggle for Irak and Syria, and the constant threat of Egypt, many Turks began to doubt England's superiority. By occupying Greece and the Aegean Islands Germany had become a neighbor whose superior military power constituted a direct threat. Turkey felt obliged to revise her policy and signed a friendship pact with Germany June 18, 1941. In article 2 this treaty contains a clause according to which the partners oblige themselves to discuss all further questions of common interests in a friendly way and to reach a mutual understanding. This passage leaves any conclusion open at the present political situation. Turkey, however, does not fool herself about the value of a treaty with Germany which was signed on the part of the Nazis by Herr von Papen.

The relations with Great Britain have lately improved again, the heroic resistance of the Russian people has aroused greatest sympathy among the Turkish population. Decisive is the fact that the responsible leaders of Turkey are well aware that the final outcome of this war hinges on the speed of production and its early arrival. America's entry into the war, with the gigantic step-up of war production in the United States, will definitely make a great impression on the government as well as on the population of Turkey.

In the meantime this problem will be left to the Turkish statesmen—to succeed in walking along a narrow and dangerous ridge of rocks without being caught in the storm and thrown into the abyss.

Wartime Washington

Slums Get The Run-Around

WASHINGTON has seldom had a better example of how its government operates than that provided recently by two Congressional committees. A hearing on the Goodwillie plan before the House Buildings and Grounds Committee gave rise to an uproar over the insanitary conditions existing in the city slums. Members of the committee were obviously shocked. Most of them had not realized that the slums within a few blocks of the Capitol are served by foul outside toilets that are often in disrepair; that many of these toilets are within 2 feet of the water supply, thus creating dangers of contamination, and that the death rate in these slums clearly proves them to be a grave menace to health.

PUSEY

Some Congressmen were furious when they learned that these neglected slums increase the danger of a wartime epidemic in Washington. Why, they properly asked, are such conditions allowed to exist in the Nation's Capital? Local officials and other witnesses present were questioned sharply. But no satisfactory answer was found.

Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, executive secretary of the Washington Housing Association, added to the indignation of Congressmen when she said that this menace to health was known to the House District Committee and intimated that further appeals for a clean-up would be a waste of words. The District Committee met last week in response to this challenge. Chairman Randolph spoke of conditions "opposite to good health . . . such as open toilets in which the overflow is running on the ground and even into a well where the water is being used by certain families." "Now it is easy to see," he continued, "that the members of Congress are not fully advised on these matters and it is easy to see that Congress should know about these matters."

LATER, Mr. Randolph called attention to the fact that Congress passed two years ago a bill introduced by himself to prevent the erection of any additional outdoor privies in the District and to require a clean-up of existing insanitary conditions. It appears that that act has not been properly enforced, because there is some disagreement as to its meaning and in any event the Health Department didn't have enough inspectors to force compliance with this and other laws aimed to clean up rotten housing.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, told the committee that the District's effire sanitary system is inadequate and unsatisfactory. "That service," he said, "has functioned with some 23 people, one-third of whom are past 60 years of age. The average age is about 50 . . . Transportation facilities, car tokens, were consistently denied them up to this year." One scarcely needs a keen imagination to realize how little sanitary inspection has been done under these circumstances.

"There has been a serious handicap in the administration of sanitation in the District," Dr. Ruhland went on to say, "for at the present time no less than seven different agencies in the District are dealing with the problem of housing. That is needlessly annoying to the individual who appeals to the Government on housing problems . . . the authority is in so many hands that I regard it as almost hopeless, and it means the passing of the buck."

Commissioner Mason then came into the discussion with the comment: "The situation in the District of Columbia, as I see it, after nearly seven months of study, is one of lack of policy. Congress is not to blame any more than the Commissioners are to blame, or the White House is to blame, or anyone else. It is something that has been going on since the Civil War and we have gone at it piecemeal. We have not kept up our appropriations and our inspection and our other facilities along with the growth of the population. We are trying to run a city of one million people on an appropriation for a city of 400,000 . . . the truth of the matter is that we have never had a sound policy on that matter."

MR. MASON won deserved commendation for his candid admission that "the Commissioners have not done their duty on the premises." At his request, however, the city fathers have now asked for funds to employ nearly 200 additional inspectors, nurses and so forth for the Health Department. The irony of the situation is that this request will not go to either of the commmittees which have taken an interest in Washington's rotten housing. It will go to the Appropriations Committee, which may or may not take the trouble to ascertain why these additional employes are desperately needed.

Here, then, is a perfect example of the merry-go-round which passes for Government in the District of Columbia. Some members of Congress apparently thought they had corrected the appalling lack of sanitation in the slums by passing a law, even though they provided no funds for its enforcement. Many other Representatives did not know that such conditions existed. And why should they? They were sent to Washington to legislate for the Nation, not to serve as city councilmen for the District. Dr. Ruhland permitted his department to hobble along with an almost useless sanitary division without creating a furor about it. The Commissioners let these ghastly sores continue to fester because Congress has denied them funds in the past and they know that it is a painful task to get legislation through the Budget Bureau and two houses of Congress. And they do not have to answer to the local community for any failure to act.

So it is impossible to say who is responsible for the foul conditions that now menace the health of the Capital in wartime. The simple fact is that no one official or group of officials is responsible. And that is why nothing is done. Congress holds the power, but it can never be an effective city council. It lacks both the time and the detailed knowledge of local conditions to govern the city intelligently. The local authorities know what should be done, but they can't spend a dime until it has been appropriated by Congress. Poor health, rotten housing and lawlessness are natural products of this hopeless complex, illogical and confused system. What does Congress expect of a government that places responsibility nowhere and denies to the community the privilege of ousting officials who fail to do their duty? All the righteous legislative wrath under the sun will not rescue the Capital from its pitiful predicament until this basically unsound system is abandoned.

Cities to Observe Pan American Day

Civic programs are being prepared by mayors throughout the country for the annual observance of Pan American Day, April 14, it was announced yesterday by the Pan American Union. The occasion has been celebrated by the Western Hemisphere nations since 1931.

"Present information indicates that the day will have deep significance in the republics to the South," the Pan American Union said.

Trade Board Asked To Indorse Health Check-up Plan

Stating that periodic health examinations are "in the best interests of the individual," Dr. Darrell C. Crain, yesterday urged the Board of Trade to indorse the District of Columbia Medical Society's plan for such examinations.

Dr. Crain said that at least half of the society's members were ready to make the examinations at a flat fee of $5. The examination provides for a complete physical check-up and is designed to reveal physical defects, such as diabetes, which otherwise might not come to light until the disease had reached advanced stages.

Individuals interested in these examinations were advised to contact their own physicians to ascertain whether they are members of the cooperative plan. If not, the Medical Society will supply a list of Washington physicians who are, Dr. Crain stated.

U. S. Manager Starts Rehiring Rail Strikers

Peoria, Ill., March 23 (AP).—J. W. Barriger, the first Government representative to run a railroad in 22 years, began taking applications today from strikers who want to return to work on the Toledo, Peoria & Western Railroad.

One of Barriger's first official acts in his new capacity as "Federal manager" of the vital 239-mile line was to scrap the cause of an 85-day-old strike of 104 employes—the contract on wages and working conditions.

Barriger, associate director of the Office of Defense Transportation, announced that at 12:01 a. m. (Central war time) Wednesday, pay rates, rules and working condition which existed prior to the start of the strike last December 28 would be reinstated.

In notices posted in roundhouses and at meeting places of the railroad brotherhoods, he announced that applications for reinstatement must be made before noon Wednesday. He said earlier that with "certain exceptions," all of the 104 strikers would be rehired.

Within an hour after the notices went up, approximately 40 strikers had asked for reinstatement, a Government spokesman said.

Barriger, who was appointed following an order by President Roosevelt Saturday for Federal seizure of the road, said the old scale of wages and working conditions would continue until a new contract was arbitrated.

Barriger said he was unfamiliar with terms of the old contract on which operations will be conducted temporarily, pending an examination of the road's records. However, the railroad previously asserted that the new contract which precipitated the strike raised wages an average of 26.7 per cent and paid $9.56 for engineers; $8.36 for conductors; $7.40 for firemen and $7 for brakemen on an eight-hour day, straight time basis. The brotherhoods disputed this contention, claiming that the new contract cut wages and ignored seniority rights.

The new manager said the only exceptions to his announced rehiring policy would be those involved in "alleged or proven unlawful conduct" since the start of the strike. He said the nonstrikers who replaced the men on strike would "go to the bottom of the seniority list."

Emmerich Confirmed

Norfolk Steamer Resumes Schedule To Washington

Norfolk, Va., March 23 (AP).—The Norfolk and Washington Steamboat Co.'s steamer District of Columbia, tied up here since Saturday because of dissatisfaction among her fireroom crew, sailed this afternoon at 5:45 o'clock on her regular run to the Nation's Capital.

The steamer Southland, which arrived Sunday morning, sailed that afternoon on the return voyage to Washington. The District of Columbia was the only vessel of the line affected by the disarranged schedule.

It was stated at the office of the line that the steamer was delayed because some of her fireroom crew failed to return to their posts until this morning.

Reading Milk Strike Ends Pending Parleys

Reading, Pa., March 23 (AP).—A two-day strike of 400 union milk truck drivers and dairy employes which had halted deliveries to thousands of residents was terminated tonight.

Union representatives, after a day-long conference, agreed to order the resumption of deliveries pending arbitration of the workers' request for a 10 per cent wage increase. Sixteen dairies were affected by the walkout.

Get Rid of Swayback as First Step Toward Better Figure

By Ida Jean Kain

It's a law that two objects cannot occupy the same space at the same time and if your lower back curves in, your stomach has to curve out. The way to make the greatest improvement in your figure the fastest is to get rid of that sway back.

One thing you can do will help amazingly: Simply make a habit of sitting with the small of your back pressed against the back of your chair. As an exercise this is almost too mild to be counted. But since you may easily sit for a third of the day, it results in a steady strengthening of the muscles in this region.

You may not have used the muscles in the lower back and abdomen for so long that you can't sit many minutes in this position. In that case, start off with a few corrective exercises taken in a prone position on the floor.

One of the best consists in lying on your back on the floor, either with knees flexed and feet on floor near the hips, or with feet elevated on a low bench or chair. As you lie there, rhythmically contract the stomach muscles and press the small of the back down against the floor. Hold hard for a second, relax and repeat.

That is an easy exercise, although you may not find it so at first. As you become more limber, however, you will enjoy putting these muscles through their paces. After you have kept at this for a few days you will be ready to go on.

Lie on the back on the floor with both knees flexed, thighs resting on abdomen and feet over the hips. Using your hip and stomach muscles, yank alternate knees down against the chest. You will have to work at this, but it will round out the lower back, give you a flat stomach and even slim the hips. Begin with about 20 counts for both knees and gradually increase.

The "wall bicycle" is another effective corrective for sway back and protruding abdomen. Lie with buttocks close to wall, legs straight up the wall. Flex one knee and bring it to chest, then slide foot back up wall. As this foot goes up, the other should come down. Continue for 20 counts and gradually add to your stint.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Although Very Handsome, of Illustrious Family, And Recognized as Genius in His Own Right, Man Shrinks From Meeting People, to Wife's Distress

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been in America only a year and do not have a perfect knowledge of English language. However, I hope I can make myself understood. I married a man who is emotionally and socially a child, but intellectually much ahead of people his age. He does not like to meet people, and, even if he does, he keeps himself absolutely quiet. He objects to my inviting people for dinner, with the reason that he cannot be at ease with anyone except me.

He comes from the best family in our country, with both parents highly successful people. He lost his mother when he was young. I have realized now that he has been treating me more like a mother than his wife. Sometimes he would say, "Wherever you go, I will go," or "Protect me and love me are all I ask of you." I love him to the extent that I would like to do anything for him, as long as it is harmless. But, I ask, is it harmless to love him so much?

I hope you can give me constructive advice on how to treat him, that I may help him grow up, so that he will have more happiness in life. He is very handsome and has been considered a genius, because of his scholarly achievements at an early age. He has not made a single friend during the year in Washington and, from his attitude, I can tell that he does not care to make any. He is doing a special work here, and his work is well appreciated. But everyone cannot help from wondering why he talks so little. What is the best way to make him more sociable and unstrained toward people? I trust your sound judgment and I shall be waiting patiently for your reply.

Sincerely, W. T. T.

Man Suffers Want Of Solid Self-Esteem

DEAR W. T. T.: If your husband is to be really helped to "grow up" to the point where he can be "more sociable and unstrained toward people," he must be brought, firstly, to an acceptance of the fact that (a) the trouble is not with people; but (b) with his uneasy reaction to them: a reaction engendered by his grievous lack of self-esteem. And he must be given to see, secondly, that it is his imperative social duty, as a civilized adult, to intelligently investigate and put to rest those infantile, bootless anxieties within himself (carried over from childhood) that makes him wretchedly ill at ease and nervously inarticulate in general company.

In expecting or indirectly requiring you to relinquish a normal way of life in order to share his defensive exile, he is subjecting your compassionate love for him to a vitiating strain, that may eventually exhaust it altogether—thus leaving him completely in the dark with his neurosis. In the restful oasis of your companionship, reassured by the knowledge of your protective devotion, he should have gained strength and incentive, long since, to shake off the restraining clutches of those subconscious phantoms that block his emotional and social development.

On the contrary, however, it seems that he has taken advantage of the peace found with you, to "cease and desist" from any painful efforts—such as he must have previously made—to establish a tolerable interchange with some portion of society. In other words, he has tended, since affiliating himself with you, to retreat deeper into his neurosis—consoling himself, for his backsliding inertia, with the hope (or intention) of beguiling you into endorsing, abetting and even faithfully companioning his "retreat from reality." Yet, to the extent that you make possible for him a comfortable isolation from his fellowmen—to that extent do you pander to, and thus worsen, his regressive tendency.

In view of his nervous diffidence, it is understandable that he might look to his best beloved for reassuring encouragement when coping with assorted, self-assured people. And because of his basic need of strong psychic support, it is right and proper for you to "boost his stock," with quiet consistency, in public and private—and not so much by a show of affection as by expressing or unmistakably implying sincere respect for such pleasing attributes of his character as may be fittin'y emphasized in the circumstance. This would be a real contribution to his welfare—a morale-building activity. But it is a type of contribution you cannot make unless he puts himself in line to receive and utilize it. Which means, unless he deliberately undertakes to master the techniques and conform to the pattern of normal social behavior.

Psychologists tell us that habitual nervous silence in company is an "unreasonable precaution," an extreme defensive measure, adopted by the person who is so anxiously unsure of his social competence that he dare not invite the slightest notice—for fear he may make an unfavorable impression. The seeds of this attitude are invariably sown in childhood. Thus, humiliating failure to win parental approval on the basis of spontaneous behavior, may account for your husband's seclusiveness. His "highly successful" parents may have held him sternly, under pain of disapproval, to standards of accomplishment compatible with their record of achievement—which standards he may have felt he did not then and never could meet; with the result that he has since unconsciously assumed he is essentially unacceptable to discriminating persons.

Or, quite the contrary, he may have been extravagantly admired by his parents for his precocious intellectual genius as a child, which admiration he never received in equal measure after his mother's death, or after going off to school, with the result that he early succumbed to a shocked distrust of what seemed to him the cruelly indifferent world outside the home. In any event, his fearsome evasion of casual social commerce and clinging dependence upon your exclusive companionship are acute symptoms of a personality problem that goes too deep for you to correct by sympathetic ministrations.

Unless he gets at the roots of the problem, via psycho-analytical inquiry, and reconstructs his personality on a firm foundation of self understanding and self acceptance, there is little hope of his coming of age, psychologically.

Prince, Princess Gourelli Explore New Fields For Cosmetic Needs

By Carolyn Abbott.
Post Beauty Editor

"IF YOU don't want to be at a disadvantage when you are with a man resplendent in uniform, you had better watch your grooming." That is what one young wife told me recently after she had made her first appearance with her newly commissioned husband.

But now that there is a new discipline and exactitude in daily living, it is equally necessary for a man to look to his grooming. Also, now that keeping fit has become the order of the day, there is a new emphasis on the attainment of beauty through health.

Because of this, Prince and Princess Gourelli (she is Helena Rubinstein) have developed their "cosmetics of the future," which are being introduced to Washington in a local department store this week.

Old Compounds

These products are compounded of the best of the oldest and newest ingredients known to cosmetic science—of fresh cucumber juice, of herbal and flower extracts, of vitamins and minerals, organic substances and other products of modern research laboratories.

The princess is well qualified to give beauty advice as she was a medical science student before entering the beauty field 33 years ago. Through experience in her salon she learned that men should have advice on beauty as well as women. Often mothers brought their young sons to her for the treatment of adolescent skin and in many cases she found the youngsters suffered from inferiority complexes as a result of disfigured complexions.

When she married the prince she found the opportunity to follow this interest because he had bushy, unmanageable hair and spent much time in the apothecary studying grooming recipes, many of them compounds of herbal and vegetable extracts.

Modern Presentations

The two have presented their preparations in modern adaptations of apothecary jars—white jars and bottles with black crests for the men, and blue jars and bottles with multi-colored crests for women. Besides their creams, lipsticks, powders and perfumes, there are many other specialties among which are the following:

Collodial sulphur series—Includes relaxing bath, corrective cream, scalp lotion and latherless shampoo.

Active ozone—A shave cream for men and a cream for both men and women which releases nascent oxygen. The shave soap insures a closer, smoother and more healthy shave.

Herbal compounds—Preparation providing complexion benefits.

Emulsion for men—Herbal compound providing protection against dry, cracked skin. Excellent for use after being exposed to strong wind or sun.

Vita-wafers—Crunch crackers which are the first vitamin and minerals in such edible form. These crackers provide the minimum adult daily requirement of vitamins and minerals. High in satiety value and low in calories (23 calories per wafer), they are ideal for reducing diet.

Herb tea—Called "pick-up" for a cup of it will relieve one of vitality slouch.

New Washing Machine

The last word in washing machines is a marvelous new affair that has been perfected to the point where it really makes washing a good show to watch and no work to do. The only catch is that the priorities situation is holding up production "for the duration."

Washable Polka Dots

Noting that polka dots spot the spring fashion horizon as trimming, or as blouses and jackets worn with solid colors, the American Institute of Laundering reminds us that the washables which look prettiest longest are those which have been tested and approved for launderability. Otherwise, smart styling soon may be lost in the bleared and faded appearance which too often results when untested materials are used. Informative labels are wise guides to the satisfactory launderability of all washables.

Study HomeAid For Defense

BRAVO, HOUSEWIFE! Important at all times, your job is more than ever one of the biggest in the country, for you're not only wife, mother and manager, but home nurse as well.

National defense hinges on the health of all the people—of your little boy and your husband, too. For germs can travel disastrously if you, the home nurse, aren't on guard.

When Junior comes down with a cold, it's you who put him to bed and make him stay there for a day or two. It's you who feed him a glass of fruit juice every hour—the best cold cure known.

And it's you who may be called on tomorrow to care for someone suffering from shock or from injury. So know simple first aid for emergencies.

The symptoms of shock are cold limbs, a pale face, a weak rapid pulse. Apply hot water bags to the feet; if the patient is conscious give hot black coffee.

In a case of severe burns, where there's blistering or charring, you put your patient to bed and keep her warm (yes, with hot water bags) until the doctor comes.

Armed with right nursing information you can do a fine job. In our 40-page booklet on home nursing, a trained nurse tells simple first aid in emergencies and explains the symptoms and nursing of contagious diseases. Gives daily routine care of bed and postoperative patients; pregnancy and new baby care.

Send 15 cents (plus 1 cent to cover cost of mailing) for our booklet, "Practical Instruction for the Home Nurse," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Capital Whirl

by Hope Ridings Miller

"A madhouse of conferences."

That was a telephone description given yesterday by someone speaking of the Shoreham apartment of the Australian Minister of External Affairs and Mrs. Herbert Vere Evatt . . . Seems that the visitors had no sooner hit town on Saturday than the conferences with U. S. officials began, and by yesterday the calendar of appointments was full speed ahead, and no mistake about it.

Out of "the madhouse," nevertheless, I did manage to gather a few facts about the noted Australian and his American-born wife, who are adding quite a fillip of interest, official and otherwise, to the current Capital scene. First, I found out that while there will be a party or two for them—if there's time left from conferences—there will certainly be "nothing social on the grand scale." It's business, very important business, too, that has brought the Evatts to Washington; and parties, if any, will be a minor consideration.

Minister of External Affairs

Rather on the quiet side is blond Mrs. Evatt, who originally hailed from Iowa and is quite a person in her own right. She's an artist of considerable merit, and several years ago when Mrs. Richard Casey purchased one of her paintings, a mutual interest in art helped to develop their friendship.

First time Mrs. Evatt had ever been in a plane was the day she boarded one for the trip to this country. The trip was more pleasant than she expected. Not the talkative type, she, nevertheless, is not averse to discussing her husband's merits. And why not? Certainly his list of achievements is enough to make anybody sit up and take notice. A lawyer in Sydney until he was appointed to Australia's highest court, he resigned from that in 1940 to enter Parliament. One year later to the day he was appointed Attorney General and Minister of External Affairs. Although he is still in his forties, he has written a number of scholarly books on Australian history and is an authority on constitutional law.

Mrs. Evatt

Mrs. W. J. Calhoun Here for Visit

"When they froze American money in China, I thought it was high time I got out," said Mrs. William James Calhoun, who made her home in Peking for many years . . . and still hopes to get back there the minute the war is over.

Now in Washington for a few days, Mrs. Calhoun is being widely entertained. She has visited here many times, and numbers by the dozens the Washington friends whom she has entertained in China.

Long as I can remember I've heard fabulous stories about the lacquered columns, exquisite furnishings and rich effects of Mrs. Calhoun's palace in Peking. Located in a choice spot of one of the world's most fascinating cities, it has been a social mecca for prominent Americans for many years. It was while her late husband was serving as U. S. Minister to China that Mrs. Calhoun fell in love with the country in general and Peking in particular. It was then, too, that she acquired her palace, part of which had at one time been a temple; and decided to make it her permanent home.

During part of the time that she presided there, she shared honors as a famous hostess with Lady Bredon, but when the latter died the crown was turned over solely to Mrs. Calhoun; and for a generation it was said that no outstanding American ever considered his visit to Peking complete until he had been wined and dined at her festive board.

Steadfastly refusing to move out of her home during the first phase of the Japanese attack on China, Mrs. Calhoun finally pulled up stakes in August and started homeward. "Getting out was no trouble at all," she told me yesterday. "I just packed up my belongings, closed my house, and booked passage for America." In other words, she quietly sailed away from her adopted land, taking the last passenger trip made by the S. S. Coolidge.

The former Lucy Monroe, of Chicago, Mrs. Calhoun is a sister of the late Harriet Monroe, famous poet, who was founder, editor and financial godmother of the magazine Poetry. Shortly after arriving in this country six months ago, Mrs. Calhoun stopped off in Chicago to visit friends and relatives. On Saturday, she arrived here, and registered at the Mayflower, where she expects to remain for a week at least.

The Joseph Hewes to Be Christened

No sooner had she reached town than parties and party plans began to swirl around her. Col. and Mrs. Thomas Betts entertained her at luncheon on Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Smyth have invited in a number of friends to tea in Mrs. Calhoun's honor tomorrow afternoon, and Clarence Hewes will give a dinner for her on Thursday evening. That only gives you an idea; for a number of other parties are going on the Calhoun calendar in the next few days.

Among guests at Mr. Hewes' dinner which, I understand, is to be a small affair, will be Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers, who will arrive in town tomorrow from New York to visit him . . . You know, of course, that the Rogers are great friends of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor who were married at the Rogers villa on the Riviera . . . Frequent visitors to Washington, the Rogerses have been in this country since the beginning of the war and are now making their home at Carlton House in New York.

Mrs. Herman Rogers

Mention of Mr. Hewes reminds me that the name of one of his most distinguished ancestors is to be given to a ship that will be christened on Sunday—the U. S. S. Joseph Hewes . . . The shipyard at Wilmington, N. C., will be the scene of the ceremony at

Wessels Fete New Attache And Wife

In her native Sweden, giving parties in honor of people is rare as a June day in January, but Mme. Wessel, attractive wife of the Swedish Military Attache, is one who believes in following the custom of the country when, and if, possible. Yesterday, therefore, when guests arrived at the Wessel home on Foxhall Road for an "after 5:30 fete," they found the party, like most others this season, was definitely "for a purpose."

In other words, the event had been arranged so that a number of diplomats, officials and residential Washingtonians could meet Count Fredrik Wachtmeister, new Attache of the Swedish Legation, and Countess Wachtmeister. "They are the guests of honor—even though they didn't get here on time," said Mme. Wessel, with an engaging smile."

Little Ann Wessel Center of Attention

Somebody else ventures that the Wachtmeisters might also be trying to emulate a well-worn Washington custom—that of arriving at any party well after the opening hour. One guest, however, who clings to her country's custom of coming early to any event to which she happens to be invited, is Mme. Chu, wife of the Chinese Military Attache. Not only on time, but well ahead of the opening hour, Mme. Chu was on hand to greet Mme. Wessel. In other words, arriving early is an ancient way of paying a compliment to the hostess.

Gayly informal from first to last, the party drew a number of guests from the Diplomatic Corps. Staying in the drawing room to help her parents receive was small Ann Wessel, daughter of the household, whose portrait, painted by Einar Nerman, hangs over the fireplace and was a center of much favorable attention yesterday.

Capt. Wessel greeted guests wherever he happened to be—either in the dining room where coffee and tea, and a variety of teatime dainties were served, or in the drawing room, where stronger drinks went the rounds. Baroness Stackelberg poured tea and coffee during the party, and soon the dining room was as crowded with guests as the drawing room and library had been for the first half hour.

Miss Doris Habig Is Bride of Robert Mathias

Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. P. Mathias, who were married Saturday at St. Martin's Church, Baltimore, Md., planned the ceremony so it could take place while the bridegroom is on leave from Camp Meade, Md. He has been in service there since February, 1941.

The bride, who is the former Miss Doris Habig, of Cumberland, Md., is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph I. Habig. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Vera Kirk. Joseph M. Mathias, of Hyattsville, Md., served his brother as best man. Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the Baltimore home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Francis Habig.

The bride attended Ursuline Academy in Cumberland and is now a record librarian at the Franklin Square Hospital, Baltimore. Her husband, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Mathias, of this city, attended Wilson Teachers College and was employed in the art department of The Washington Post before being called into service. He is well known in Washington amateur athletic circles and was formerly a National Golden Gloves boxing champion.

U. S. Ambassador to Cuba Honored at Embassy Dinner

In the midst of a whirl of fetes before he leaves to take over his new diplomatic post as United States Ambassador to Cuba, Sprulle Braden and Mrs. Braden will be guests of honor many times over before Mrs. Braden returns to New York at the end of the week.

Last night the Cuban Ambassador and Senora de Concheso honored the new United States envoy to their country with a brilliant dinner at the Embassy; tonight, Mr. and Mrs. William Stanley will be hosts at a dinner for the Bradens, and tomorrow night Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Walmsley, jr., will honor them at a dinner. Mrs. Braden plans to remain in New York until her husband, who has recently resigned as Ambassador to Colombia, joins her there at the end of the month. She has been in the Capital since Friday.

Among the guests at the dinner at the Cuban Embassy last night were the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins, the Ambassador of Colombia, Dr. Gabriel Turbay; the Ambassador of Chile and Senora de Michels and their daughter, Senorita Cristina Michels; the Polish Ambassador and Mme. Ciechanowska, the Guatemalan Minister and Senora de Recinos, Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, Senator Tom Connally, Representative Sol Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom, and Donald Nelson.

Others in the group were the Minister of Finance of Cuba, Dr. Oscar Garcia Montez, and Senora de Montez; the Minister of the Presidency of Cuba, Dr. Amadeo Lopez Castro; Mrs. J. Butler Wright, Mrs. Rosa Casanova, the President of the Export-Import Bank and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, George T. Summerlin, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Duggan, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Bonsal, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Walmsley, jr., Mr. and Mrs. James H. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. George Scherer, Lieut. Col. Winant W. Johnston, the Minister Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Baron, Lieut. Col. Felipe Munilla, Military and Air Attache of the Cuban Embassy; Lieut. Felipe Cadenas, Naval Attache of the Cuban Embassy; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Berenson, Miss Consuelo Batista, Miss Mary Wright, Dr. Casto Mier Burbano, Senorita Elena Garcia, and J. M. Lasa.

Mrs. W. Naude Gives Party For Sister

Not a very big party, because it was an unexpected one for a guest who is in town only for a few days, was that given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. W. C. Naude, wife of the Attache of the South African Legation, in honor of her sister, Mrs. Morrill S. Reynolds, of Marblehead, Mass.

Mrs. Naude hopes to be able to persuade her sister to stay over as their house guest at the St. Regis Apartments here until the end of the week. Since Mrs. Reynolds arrived Friday, the two of them have kept busy working on the South African exhibit which opened yesterday at the British War Relief Society headquarters.

Yesterday's tea was informal, as were the telephoned invitations Mrs. Naude had made earlier.

Among the guests who dropped by during the afternoon hours was a generous representation from the Naude's own South African Legation including Mrs. A. T. Brennan, wife of the commercial counselor; Mrs. J. R. Jordaan, wife of the secretary; Mrs. J. D. de Villiers Rademan, wife of the assistant air and military attache, and Mrs. J. E. Bruce, wife of the attache.

A few guests from the diplomatic circles and State Department filled out the party list. From the British Embassy were Mrs. A. K. Helm, wife of the counselor, and Mrs. John Summerscale, wife of the commercial secretary. The Czechoslovakian Legation was represented by Mme. Cervenka, wife of the counselor, and Mme. Palic, wife of the first secretary. Mme. Molekamp, wife of the Netherlands commercial counselor was among the others, as were Mrs. Dashiell L. Madeira, wife of Commander Madeira, U. S. N.; Mrs. George Wythe, Mrs. Max Boyd and Mrs. Arthur Schroeder.

Costa Rican Envoy To Attend Lecture

The Minister of Costa Rica, Dr. Luis Fernandez, will be guest of honor at a lecture by the Rev. Benjamin Nunez, of Costa Rica, tomorrow evening at 8:15 o'clock in the Department of Commerce Auditorium. The lecture is sponsored by The Americas Society and will deal with "Social Security and Unemployment in Latin America." Father Nunez will speak in Spanish.

Following the lecture there will we shown a travel film, "The Land of the Incas." The public is invited to attend without charge.

Jean Adkins To Be Bride of Nicholas Shea

Norman R. Adkins, of Lafayette, Ind., announces the engagement of his sister, Miss Jean Adkins, of Washington, to Lieut. Nicholas H. Shea, U. S. A. A. C., son of Mrs. Frank Peirce, of this city.

Miss Adkins, who is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lee Adkins, of Lafayette, Ind., was graduated from the University of Purdue, where she was a member of Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority. She attended the University of Florence, Italy. Her fiance is also a graduate of the University of Purdue, where he was affiliated with Alpha Tau Omega Fraternity.

The wedding will take place early in May.

Helen Badeau Weds W. M. Cellar

Of interest in Washington, the former home of the bride's mother, was the marriage of Miss Helen Annin Badeau, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry U. Badeau, of Cleveland, Ohio, to William Matthew Cellar, U. S. Army, of Bridgeport, Conn., which took place March 21 in St. Cecelia Parish Home in Cleveland.

Mrs. Badeau was formerly Miss Emily Louise Elliott, of Washington and Alexandria, Va., sister of Dr. Henry R. Elliott and Col. Charles B. Elliott, of Washington.

The bride's sister, Mrs. Clayton Staples Elwood, of Fairfield, Conn., was matron of honor, and Edward Cellar, U. S. Navy, was best man. The bridegroom is attached to the Army Air Corps and is stationed in Boston, Mass.

Benefit Workers Wear Symbol Of Allied Aid

That Russian parachuter-in-action pin you've been seeing on the lapels of members of the committee sponsoring the Russian benefit concert, to be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra March 31, is the "Happy Landings" pin.

Designed by Lester Gaba, a Russian-American, this latest of symbols of aid to the Allies is on sale at the Russian War Relief, Inc., in the Farragut Building.

Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Sassani To Return April 1

Now on their wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Joseph Sassani will be at home after April 1 at 1380 Fort Stevens Drive.

Mrs. Sassani, before her marriage, March 8 was Miss Alice Helean Gieselman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Gieselman.

Mrs. Lorton Sims Hostess at Afternoon Party With Purpose

"This is really not the first in a series of 'diminishing' parties," explained Mrs. Lorton Sims at the party with a purpose she gave yesterday after 5:30 in her home on Twenty-first street. "It's the first in a series of 'increasing' parties."

The gathering yesterday was the pebble thrown in the social pool for the benefit of the Save the Children Federation, for yesterday's guests will be tomorrow's hostesses. Most of those in the group are planning parties for next week, and the guests at their parties will plan fetes for the following week—and so it goes.

Among those who dropped in during the cocktail hours were Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Eugene Reybold, Mrs. Richard K. Sutherland, Capt. and Mrs. Phillip Eaton, Representative and Mrs. Laurence Arnold, Col. and Mrs. E. J. McGraw, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Palmer, Col. and Mrs. Reverley Snow, Mrs. Irene Caldwell, Mr. and Mrs. Willson Offutt, Mr. and Mrs. A. Burks Summers, Mr. and Mrs. I. B. which Mrs. Thomas Hewes, of Hartford, Conn., will be sponsor, and Mrs. Oliver Wendell Hammonds (the former Ellen Hewes Flowerree), of Washington, will be matron of honor.

Joseph Hewes—to dip back into history for a moment—was one of the most famous men in American history. As chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee of the Continental Congress, he was responsible for the naval appointment of John Paul Jones. Later, Hewes cast the deciding vote for American independence and after that added his note name to signers of the Declaration of Independence.

A number of Washingtonians have received invitations to a wedding that will be followed with much interest here. Principals are Miss Isabelle Meuser and Edwin Morrow O'Brien, and the ceremony is set for Monday, April 6, at the Christ Episcopal Church in Joliet, Ill. A reception will follow at 706 N. Raynor Avenue.

The bride-elect has many friends here, made during the season in which she and her sister, Marjorie, bowed to Washington society under the aegis of their generous cousin, Arthur Bradley Campbell. Also widely known in Washington is Mr. O'Brien, who visited here a number of times when he was studying at the University of Virginia.

A few months ago the rustlings of the Washington grapevine had it that Marjorie also was engaged, and that the lucky young man was J. William Wagner, her aviation instructor at Joliet . . . Thus far, however, no formal announcement of that romance has been made. So I dunno.

office, and the Danish Counselor and Mrs. Carl A. C. Brun. Trimly turned out in uniform was Col. Oscar Klingenberg, Norwegian Military Attache, who arrived with Commodore Per Askim. Norwegian Naval Attache, who was also in uniform.

Rear Admiral H. Pott, British Naval Attache, and Mrs. Pott were among those present, as were the British First Secretary and Mrs. G. F. Thorold, and William Elmslie, also of the British Embassy. The Minister of Luxemburg, Hugues Le Gallais, arrived without his wife—she's recuperating from a cold. Senor and Senora de Pardo and Senor and Senora de Scilingo were there from the Argentine Embassy, and still others the pleasant party included were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Walmsley, Dr. and Mme. H. R. Van Houten, of the Netherlands Legation; the French Counselor and Mme. Georges-Picot, and the Norwegian Second Secretary and Mme. Stabell.

Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose Returns to Capital

Undaunted by the possibility of air raids in the Capital, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose has returned to Washington, where she has taken an apartment at the Shoreham for a few weeks.

Mrs. Loose spent her winter at her home in Kansas City recovering from injuries received in an automobile accident near her summer home in Gloucester, Mass.

Before coming to Washington she made her annual presentation of shoes to the Kansas City Home for Orphan Boys, one of the many charities she contributes to both in Missouri and Washington.

Democratic Women Hear J. M. Elizalde

The one great problem the United Nations must solve is to make Asia understand the simple truth—that this war is its war, and that victory is its victory too. So declared the Philippine Resident Commissioner, J. M. Elizalde, speaking before members of the Women's National Democratic Club at its luncheon meeting yesterday. The scholarly commissioner said:

"Here is a pressing challenge to the vision and imagination of the leaders entrusted with planning the strategy of the war for the democracies . . . upon its proper solution rests the fate of half of the population of the world."

Referring to the millions of people in Asia who could be mobilized in the defense of democratic ideals and principles, Commissioner Elizalde pointed out that so far millions of Asiatics have no acute interest in the war, or even a clear understanding of the issues involved.

Millions Apathetic

"Yet," he said, "I am firmly convinced that these millions would more readily follow the banner of democracy than that of Fascist totalitarianism.

"Can we not find a way to win the apathetic millions over to the common cause?" he asked.

Continuing he said: "Let us hold out to them the advantages of democracy. The people of the Orient are thirsty for it and it is the only force that will unite them against Japan."

Referring to Gen. MacArthur's spectacular dash from the Philippines to Australia, the Commissioner emphasized the fact that MacArthur's transfer meets with the whole-hearted support of the Filipino people.

One War

"It is only human that the defense of the Philippines be nearest our hearts," he said. "But we conceive this war as one . . . This conflict is bigger than our personal misfortune . . . When bitter decisions must be made, the Filipinos will accept their share of the burden.

"If anybody has a priority on the services of Gen. MacArthur, it is the Filipino people. His life and career are inextricably aligned with our country. It would not be strange if some day history may refer to him as MacArthur of the Philippines."

Recalling the fact that up to the time of his appointment late in 1941 as commander of the United States Army forces in the Far East, Gen. MacArthur was military adviser to the President of the Philippines, Commissioner Elizalde said of the heroic general: "There is no doubt that at the time he was pondering his fateful decision to accept the higher command, he must have considered seriously his obligations toward the people and the country he has loved and served so well. . . . His departure from Bataan, then, must have had the blessing of the one man responsible for his fortunate presence in the Philippines at the time hostilities broke—President Manuel L. Quezon.

Quezon Represents Spirit

"President Quezon represents today the living spirit of the Filipino people. I can say without hesitation that his example of fighting side by side with the United States at any cost will be followed implicitly by the people of our country."

Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, wife of the former United States High Commissioner to the Philippines, presided over the luncheon. Mrs. Justin Miller, chairman of the education committee, introduced the speaker.

Mothers Group To Meet Today

Mrs. Prentiss Willson will combine business with tea today at 4:00 o'clock at her home on 2940 Albemarle Northwest, when she entertains the sponsors and board of trustees of the Mothers Health Association, at her home 2940 Albermarle Street. Plans for the annual meeting Tuesday April 7 at the Y. W. C. A. will be discussed.

Mrs. Fontaine Bradley is making the arrangements for the annual meeting. Her committee includes Mrs. Willson, Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mrs. Ganson Purcell, Mrs. Henry King, Mrs. Thomas Bradley, and Mrs. Horace White. The committee announces that Keneth Rose, director of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, will speak on April 7 on "Birth Control in State Public Health Programs."

On the lighter side of Mrs. Willson's party today will be a skit presented by Mrs. Worth Daniels and Mrs. John B. Martin, jr. Assisting at the tea table will be Mrs. David Karrick, Mrs. Albert J. McCartney, Mrs. Harold N. Marsh, Mrs. John Sternhagen, Mrs. Theodore Wilkinson and Mrs. Thomas L. Gatch.

Society of Women Geographers Work Individually on Many War Projects

WHILE MEMBERS of the Society of Woman Geographers are too scattered—located in 50 different United States cities and 42 other countries of the world—to work on a concerted defense project, nevertheless, individuals are doing their bit in the war effort, according to Mrs. William Chapin Huntington, president of the D. C. Society.

"Infact," said Mrs. Huntington, "many individual members are being drafted for war work. All members of the society have been registered for service and many are awaiting call."

Mrs. William Chapin Huntington

Among those who already are doing war work on a big scale are Dr. Margaret Meade, of New York, who is in Washington to lend her aid to nutrition, and Mrs. Dorothy Orchard, authority on the Far East. Both have been called in to give authoritative advice.

Letters to Mrs. Huntington from woman geographers in England and other United Nations countries reveal that various members of the society are contributing invaluable service to the war effort.

"But come peace," she explained, "talents and knowledge of the society's members definitely will be needed. Their first-hand information of conditions and peoples in foreign lands can aid tremendously in making a fair and just peace."

Tomorrow Mrs. Eleanor H. Lattimore, who, with her husband, Owen Lattimore, has spent many years studying in Central Asia, will speak on recent events in China before the Society of Woman Geographers at its meeting at the A. A. U. W. clubhouse.

Mrs. Huntington, the president, will preside. Others expected to attend are: Mrs. Sophia Saucerman and Miss Lois Olson, hostesses; also Miss Irene A. Wright, Mrs. Bertha Lum, Mrs. Bettina Crowe, Mrs. Gregg C. Birdsall, Miss A. Viola Smith, Miss Muna Lee, Dr. Helen M. Strong, Mrs. Eve Chapline, Miss Mary A. Nourse, Dr. Millicent Todd Bingham, Miss Helen B. Smith, Mrs. Clara Egli LeGear, Mrs. Elizabeth Shirley Enochs, Miss Margaret A. Hitch, Miss Ellen N. LaMotte, Mrs. Charles Hendley, Miss Emma M. Thom, Mrs. Marie Peary Stafford, Miss Edith M. Fitton, Mrs. Lucile Quarry Mann, Mrs. Constance D. Lathrop, Miss Taisia Stadnichenko, Mrs. Katharine C. Hafstad, Dr. Laura Hatch Martin, Mrs. Phyllis Pulliam Jervey, Mrs. Elsie May Grosvenor and Mrs. Caroline Benedit Carroll.

P.-T. A. Elections Are Staggered

LIKE the Congress of the United States, the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers employs the stagger method to elect officers. In both cases this is done obviously to keep a few experienced hands on the job.

Mrs. H. N. Stuell

Nominations of new officers for the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers are just out. Mrs. Donald Warren, recreation chairman of the D. C. Congress and a teacher in the public schools of Baltimore, received the nomination for secretary. Mrs. Roderick D. Moss, who is finishing up a term as assistant treasurer, has been nominated as treasurer.

To Mrs. Charles Sinclair, for three years chairman of the National Folk Festival and chairman of the congress' ways and means committee, goes the nomination for assistant treasurer. The assistant parent education chairman, for the D. C. Congress, Mrs. Hildegarde Davenport, was nominated for historian's office.

Mrs. H. N. Stuell received the nomination for second vice president. The fourth vice president, Mrs. B. W. Costenbader, who was filling an unexpired term, was renominated for that office. Mrs. Florence H. Rogers, supervising principal of the sixth school division and school education chairman of the D. C. Congress, was nominated to the office of sixth vice president.

Members of the nominating committee were: Mrs. Samuel H. Simmons, chairman; Mrs. Alan Sharp, Mrs. Evelyn Bright Buckely, Mrs. Edward M. Richardson and Mrs. John Rogers.

The progra convention committee met yesterday to plan events for the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers convention scheduled to meet May 19 and 20 in the Departmental Auditorium.

New School Hours Relieve Congestion

Half-Hour Later Opening Is a Success, Transit Official Says; Workers Get Seats

The new hours inaugurated yesterday for all but two of the District's senior and junior high schools were hailed as "very successful" last night by both school and Capital Transit Co. officials.

Because 33,773 senior and junior high school students reported to school at 9:30 a. m. instead of 9 a. m. the Capital Transit Co. was able to lessen crowed conditions in street cars and buses considerably, it was reported.

President Edward D. Merrill of the transit company said buses and street cars had made 140 extra trips during the period. The students now get off at 3:30 p. m. instead of 3 p. m. under the Board of Education's new ruling requested by Traffic Director VanDuzer.

The results as far as the schools are concerned could not be checked immediately, school officials said, but the first day appeared successful. Further studies will be made in a week or two, it was said. Minor changes in schedules may yet have to be worked out by the transit company.

The change in school hours was proposed by the traffic department because it was felt the load would be lessened on transit facilities by having school children come to school later leaving their seats for war workers.

God's Work Will Go On, Bishop Says

"So many things are happening today that they tend to crowd up our perspective and confuse our minds," the Right Rev. Granville Gaylord Bennett, Suffragan Bishop of Rhode Island, declared yesterday.

Speaking at Epiphany Episcopal Church at special noonday Lenten services that will continue daily through Friday, he said "We must take a long view of these events.

"We must realize that time is part of eternity, he continued, "and the only way to bet that idea is to realize the majesty of God. He has a plan and purpose that won't be thwarted."

The Rev. Elmer A. Wilcher, pastor of North Carolina Avenue Methodist Church, addressed members of Southeast churches in Lenten ceremonies at noon yesterday in the Penn Theater, 650 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast. The Rev. Paul R. Schearrer, pastor of Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, will be today's guest speaker.

The Rev. Mr. Wilcher spoke on "Christ, the Character of God." He said the only adequate revelation of the character of God is in the incarnation of God in Christ Jesus. "We do not know what the attitude of God toward human sin is," he stated, "except as we see it through Jesus."

City-wide Lutheran Lenten services were held last night at Augustana Lutheran Church. The Rev. Ralph W. Loew, associate pastor, Reformation Lutheran Church, led the services.

The Right Rev. Noble C. Powell, Coadjutor Bishop of Maryland and former dean of Washington Cathedral, will address Chevy Chase union services Thursday at 8 p. m. at Chevy Chase, Baptist Church Western Avenue, near Chevy Chase Circle.

At the same time churches of upper Sixteenth and Fourteenth Streets will hold joint services at Hamline Methodist Church, Sixteenth and Allison Streets Northwest. The Rev. Henry J. Smith, pastor of North Washington Baptist Church, will preach.

Hit-Run Case Held Over Until Inquest

A Police Court hearing for Gordon M. Arion, 44, of 233 Upshur Street Northwest, charged with leaving the scene of an accident in connection with the hit-run death of Lieut. Comdr. Francis T. Quigley, was continued yesterday until April 2 to await the outcome of a coroner's inquest which will be held at 11:30 a. m. today.

Commander Quigley was fatally injured Saturday night when struck by a car which left him lying in the road at North Capitol and Hamilton Streets. He was removed to Walter Reed Hospital, where he died Sunday night following the arrest of Arion on a tip supplied by auxiliary policemen.

Arion's bail of $1000 was raised to $2000 in Police Court yesterday.

Meanwhile, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday issued a verdict of accidental death in the case of Martin McDevitt, 68, 1863 Mintwood Place Northwest, who died last Friday night in Emergency Hospital of injuries sustained earlier in the day when he was struck by a streetcar operated by Forest C. Canard in front of 1862 Columbia Road Northwest.

Leo McCormick Heads OPA Field Office in Baltimore

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, March 23.—Leo H. McCormick, former Maryland director of the Labor Department's wage and hour division, has been named acting regional director of a newly created regional headquarters for an Office of Price Administration field office embracing Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia.

Headquarters of the office, established in Baltimore today, announced that inspectors already were in the field. Regional officers in addition to McCormick, include Dr. Lloyd G. Reynolds, formerly of Johns Hopkins University, regional price executive; Clifford R. Snyder, acting regional attorney; Robert Lowry, acting price attorney, and Robert Koerner, acting rationing attorney.

In connection with the new office, McCormick said its establishment "marks an extension of OPA's policy of setting up offices in the field to bring administration of the law as close to the people as possible. This office will work in the closest cooperation with the State rationing administrators to aid them in the many problems they will encounter."

Couple Asks $12,500 As Collision Damages

Raymond Hall, jr., and Carroll A. Burch, both of Silver Spring, are named defendants in two suits for damages totaling $12,500, filed in the Circuit Court at Rockville as an outgrowth of a motor vehicle accident at Chicago and Richmond Avenues, Silver Spring, July 3, 1941.

The plaintiffs are Mrs. Blanche A. Wehrle and her husband, Guy R. Wehrle. Mrs. Wehrle asks $10,000 for injuries suffered in a collision with a taxicab owned by Burch and operated by Hall.

Wehrle is suing for $2500 for loss of his wife's services and for damage to his car. The plaintiffs are represented by Attorneys Joseph A. Cantrel and James C. Christopher.

Air Derby Association Will Honor Stanton

Charles I. Stanton, acting Civil Aeronautics administrator, will receive the Washington Air Derby Association's annual award at a dinner in the Lee-Sheraton Hotel at 7 p. m. today.

The association announced Stanton was selected for the honor principally because of his direction of the CAA program of pilot training.

Kin Receive Estate

Mrs. Nellie Lake Ridgeway and Fulton T. Lake, sister and brother, each receives $1000 under the will of Robert Howard Lake, of Takoma Park, which has been admitted to probate in the Orphans' Court at Rockville. The residue goes to the testator's wife, Mrs. Virginia Leila Lake, who is named executrix. The will was executed August 15, 1933.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Big Names Sought For Advisory Committee

The Government is looking for several "big names"—preferably retired Federal judges—to make up a committee that would advise Federal agencies on whether to fire employes accused of subversive activities. Attorney General Biddle is understood to have proposed the committee. An order that would create the new agency is reported to be up for consideration by the President. The committee would only advise. Agencies wouldn't be compelled to follow its suggestions. It's proposed that the committee study the American Peace Mobilization and the American Youth Congress among other organizations, and recommend whether membership is sufficient grounds for dismissal. Opinion on the subject is now divided.

Mary Mathis, top-notch personnel director of Farm Credit, will quit April 1. She'll be appointed coordinator of the Civil Service Commission's much-decentralized placement activities. Also much needed is someone to coordinate its slap-happy information work . . . Office of Facts and Fgures has moved from the Library of Congress to 515 Twenty-second Street Northwest . . . Walter Lippmann, the columnist, and Elmer Davis, the broadcaster, have been suggested to head up a new central government information agency.

The War Information Board, headed by Librarian Archibald MacLeish, is considering a drastic information policy change. It's being seriously proposed for the Government to place paid ads in newspapers and other publications to bolster morale and the like. The British do it and their results are being studied by the board.

Officials now admit that Office of Price Administration is about to get Census' new building and that Census will be moved to nearby Suitland, Md. Census hasn't a large enough staff to occupy the Suitland building and that means another old-line agency will be moved out with it . . . The Statler Hotel won't be taken over by the Government when it's completed . . . Labor Secretary Frances Perkins is about the only official concerned who hasn't proposed a man power mobilization plan . . . Carl Berger, the GAO accountant, now has his radio program, Your Government This Week, on WWDC.

12,000 Seek Transfer

More than 12,000 Federal workers have requested transfer to war work. Applications are being made at 801 E Street at the rate of 500 a day. Largest numbers of requests are coming from General Accounting and Veterans Administration. As could be expected, GAO is making it as difficult as possible for its employes to be transferred. And the GAO red tape artists can really make it tough despite the President's order . . . War Boss Donald Nelson approved the Maritime Commission decentralization plan before it was announced. Carl W. Flesher will head the San Francisco office; L. R. Sanford will direct the New Orleans office; the Baltimore office will be under J. F. McInnis, and W. E. Spofford will have charge of the Chicago office.

That bill which would give the Postmaster General the authority to place postal workers on a 48-hour week has been passed by Congress in record time. The President will sign it, as he urged its passage. The 300,000 postal workers stand to be paid straight time for the additional eight hours. The Senate has approved the conference report on the longevity pay bill for postal workers. It calls for an increase of $84 in base pay after ten years service and an additional $60 a year upon completion of an additional five years. Now how about similar legislation for the rest of Uncle Sam's workers?

Commerce Personnel Director Oliver Short has told bureau Chiefs to give fewer "excellent" efficiency ratings. He believes that Commerce employes have been rated too high. He warned that an explanation must be made of every "excellent" rating given this year. The ratings are due April 1 . . . Joe A. Jordan has been appointed chief of Treasury employes. Joe was transferred from Farm Credit. . . . Al Faulstich has been appointed chief of classification at Treasury . . . Agriculture has retired George LaPierle, May D. Strickland, Ethel Cunningham, William Collins and Elizabeth Day.

Fine Idea But Wrong Tune.

Montgomery, Ala.—A Post Exchange officer was convinced he had a sure-fire seller in a soldier's sweetheart gift when he stocked up on some musical powder boxes. Weeks rolled by but the musical powder boxes didn't. They seemed anchored on the shelves. "They're fine powder boxes, sir," finally explained one of his soldiers, "except that they play 'Anchors Aweigh!'"

Masks Used for Barracks Bags

Fort MacArthur, Calif.—Inspecting officers examined several thousand training gas masks and unmasked interesting soldier caches. Listed among items cached away in the improvised barracks bags were: Fifteen rounds of ammunition, a deck of cards, a large box of kidney pills, 15 candy bars, tent pegs and ropes, a ration of coffee, and—of course—a can opener.

Nothing Must ThreatenUnity, Biddle Warns

Nothing must threaten the unity of the United Nations today in their determination that all peoples shall "live as human beings and not as beasts," Francis Biddle, Attorney General of the United States, declared last night.

He spoke at the annual national banquet of the Order of Ahepa (American Hellenic Educational Progressive Association) held in the Mayflower Hotel and marking the beginning of its annual business meeting which will continue here throughout the week.

"Any attempt to take advantage of the war to push an ambition that is not for the good of the Nation as a whole should not be tolerated by the weight of public opinion," he told members of the fraternity, which is composed of American citizens of Greek descent.

"The broad public interest must always come first," he asserted, and because freedom is both our cause and our assurance, we must preserve and extend it while we are fighting.

Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, in a talk on "Free Men Shall Stand," spoke of the necessity for alertness against enemy agents in this country, but warned:

"Rumor and hearsay, wild political charges directed against honest citizens, are as dangerous to the security and strength of our Nation as are the saboteurs themselves."

The Attorney General's talk was broadcast over a coast-to-coast hookup. Other speakers on the program included George Depasta, Minister-Counselor of the Greek Legation, and Van A. Nomikos, supreme president of the Ahepa.

The committee in charge of the banquet, which besides its own representatives, included numerous members of Congress and foreign diplomats was as follows: Van A. Nomikos, George C. Vournas, Christ J. Petrov, C. B. Johannides, George J. Leber and Peter N. Chumbris.

Stores to Be Open One Night Weekly

Reports that an additional night for shopping would be instituted by Washington stores yesterday led to the following denial from the Merchants and Manufacturers Association:

"The Merchants and Manufacturers Association made a survey of the results of the one evening a week opening in the downtown stores, which was inaugurated last Thursday evening, and finds that it meets with almost universal approval of the public and stores alike. The three later shopping hours on one evening a week give those who are now working longer hours in Government work an opportunity to attend to shopping that they have not been able to do heretofore.

"The association feels that opening on Thursday evening each week will be entirely sufficient to take care of all anticipated requirements of customers, and will satisfactorily help to solve the shopping problem for the thousands of Government employes."

Mrs. Mildred Harris' Funeral Tomorrow

Services for Mrs. Mildred Moore Harris, 37, who died at her home in Washington Sunday night after an illness of two years, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the funeral home of W. Reuben Pumphrey, Bethesda. Burial will be in Monocacy Cemetery, Beallsville, Md.

Mrs. Harris was the wife of LeRoy Harris, formerly of Travilah, Md., and is survived by two sisters.

Autopsy Is Ordered In D. C. Man's Death

Archer I. Little, 45, died in Walter Reed Hospital shortly after 7 p. m. yesterday, an hour and a half after his wife found him unconscious on the bathroom floor of their apartment at 1341 Columbia Road Northwest.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said an autopsy would be held today.

OVERCROWDED CONDITIONS—With only 70 beds for some 250 service men who occupy the center at 306 Ninth Street Northwest over the week end, improvised beds are made on all available space. Georgetown Group Opposes Schulte Bill

Opposition to the Schulte bill, prohibiting advertising of liquor in the District and placing other restrictions on A. B. C. licencees, was expressed last night by the Georgetown Citizens Association.

The organization, meeting at St. John's Parish Hall, Potomac and O Streets Northwest, indorsed the Board of Trade's plan for keeping retail establishments open on Thursday nights.

Also approved was the Salvage for Victory program, and members were urged to send salvaged materials to Parent-Teacher associations.

Proposed rezoning of property at Thirty-first and R Streets Northwest to allow establishment of a rooming house was opposed in another resolution.

Mid-City

A resolution favoring legislation passed yesterday by the House to increase the salaries of police and firemen by $300 yearly was adopted last night without dissenting votes by the Mid-City Citizens Association.

The group also went on record as approving return to the District boundaries of 1788-89 which would return Arlington County to the city. Viewing with alarm the increased traffic fatality rate here, the organization passed a measure asking for more strict enforcement of the pedestrian regulations.

They also asked that motorists be restrained from blowing their horns late at night. The meeting was presided over by President A. J. Driscoll and was held in the Thomson School, Twelfth and I Streets Northwest.

Orthodontists Here From Latin-America

Dental surgeons from the 20 Latin-American republics, official delegates to the first Inter-American Orthodontic Congress, were welcomed to Washington yesterday by Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union.

They will remain here a week, observing modern technique at Walter Reed Hospital and the Naval Hospital at Bethesda, Md., and receiving special training.

Club Told Jap Doctors Aided Hawaii Injured

Japanese surgeons worked side by side at operating tables with American surgeons during the Pearl Harbor attack without "the slightest indication of treachery whatsoever."

This and other incidents of unusual note, were reported by Dr. John J. Moorhead, who supervised care of those injured in the December 7 assault, in presenting a dramatic picture of Honolulu under fire to members of the Georgetown Medical Alumni Club of Washington, meeting at the Georgetown University Medical School.

Dr. Moorhead told how he began a lecture before the Honolulu Medical Society while the attack was in progress but stopped in the middle to proceed to the military hospital and operate with other physicians for 11 hours without respite.

He described results of the surgery as "exceptional," attributing the success largely to the fact that operations were performed within six hours of injury.

"No man," he added, "ever had a better and more adept and skillful group of associates to work with than I had in those three or four fateful days."

During the first week after the attack, Dr. Moorhead said, more than 500 pints of blood a day were donated by residents.

Instead of imposing fines or sentences on law violators, he said, judges directed the defendants to give a pint of blood for transfusions.

D. C. Gives $7500 Toward Hebrew Aid

Washington has contributed $7500 toward its quota of $20,000 in the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America drive for funds, Joseph A. Wilner, chairman of the local campaign, announced yesterday.

Object of the fund is to obtain release of persons interned in concentration camps in unoccupied France and elsewhere and provide refuge for them in other parts of the world.

Ian Forbes, assistant to Wolter, threw up his hands and said, "Red tape!"

This "red tape" applied only to the $100,000 which Congress appropriated for the Center. It was the usual Government red tape—the drafting of specifications, the approval of specifications, the asking for bids, the assignment of contracts, the delivery of material, and, of course, the payment.

As for the $30,000 which the public contributed to the United Service Organizations, and which the USO reallocated to Washington, was soon spent by the Center and 12 other Washington social service agencies in the care of the service men spending leave here.

Questioned last night about this five-month delay, Charles P. Taft, assistant director of the Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services which office is responsible for creating such centers, said:

"There is no reason why peacetime methods of procurement, involving bids, specifications, and double checks can't be hurdled."

Responsibility Evaded

He said that accommodations for about 1500 men, in the form of barracks, readily could be set up in Washington if the District Defense Council would request them.

He said also that the Army "should relinquish the cantonment in Arlington, originally planned as a weekend camp for soldiers, and other facilities provided for the regular Washington guard."

Taft did not comment when reminded that the plan for a large recreational center and dormitory in the Union Station Plaza fell through because recreation and housing authorities could not agree as to whose responsibility such a project should be.

As the Center at 306 Ninth Street Northwest, now stands, it occupies a hall, used for dances, games and another room in which there are a hall, used for dances and games pool and ping-pong tables, and a third room used as a combination kitchen and dining room.

Lots of Office Space

Most of the second floor is taken up by various branches of the U. S. O. as office space. On this floor is a large room equipped as a lounge.

The third floor is the dormitory. There are seven bedrooms and one bath. The bath has four showers and four washstands. Into the seven bedrooms, each about as large as an average-sized home bedroom, there are five double-decker cots.

Ordinarily some 250 service men occupy the Center over the week-end. There are beds for only 70. Until last week there were no beds. Extra cots are jammed into the dormitory so that more than a hundred men sleep there, fitfully.

Every couch, desk and chair in the building becomes an improvised bed. Mattresses—thin ones—cover all available floor space. The tiny kitchen must first be cleared of sleeping soldiers before volunteer workers can make up a Sunday morning breakfast for their 250 guests.

These Sunday morning breakfasts are prepared and provided by volunteer workers. No funds are given either by the District Defense Council or the USO. Mrs. Emma Steed, known as "Mother" by the soldiers, and a volunteer worker, makes regular Saturday night tours of neighborhood bakeries and groceries for unsold bread and rolls, so that "her boys" won't go hungry. Occasionally some member of the Overseas League, which operates the miniature canteen, can raise a more substantial contribution, but not often.

Besides the Ninth Street Club, there are two other service men's clubs in the District: The Soldiers', Sailors' and Marines' Club, 1015 L Street Northwest, and the Y. M. C. A., 1736 G Street Northwest.

The first can care for about 200 men; the Y. M. C. A. about 75.

The overflow from these two clubs on Saturday nights are directed to the Center on Ninth Street, which then has to turn the boys away after 250 have been taken in.

During the USO campaign for funds, Washington contributed $145,000, of which $30,000 was made available in Washington. The rest went into the general USO fund for use as the USO saw fit. The USO practice is to give money to small towns near service camps—towns which could not be expected to raise enough money to care for the large numbers of soldiers or sailors or marines on leave over a weekend.

Cities like Washington, it had been thought, would be able to take care of service men without such help.

Girl Workers, Soldiers Give D. C. Churches Man-Size Job

The District Defense Commission of Washington Churches met last night for the first time since Pearl Harbor and decided they have a "man-size job on their hands" looking out for the thousands of week-ending service men and incoming hordes of Government workers in wartime Washington.

Army chaplains, pastors, laymen, "Y" officials and Government heads met in the Federation of Churches' building, 1751 N Street Northwest, to thresh out the problem.

Grover L. Hartman, director of the organization, stressed the vast number of soldiers now detailed in camps surrounding Washington, who coupled with defense workers streaming here combine to be the number one problem confronting local churches.

Although the dances and parties being given for service men in the city are highly desirable, Chaplain William S. Jones, of Camp Belvoir, stated, it is of importance to bring entertainment of a spiritual nature to the men in the camps. He suggested young people's groups interest themselves in this work. Other chaplains subscribed to this view.

Lawson Brown, director of the U. S. O., in the Central Y. M. C. A., suggested that churches place posters in their buildings showing where activities are. Bedding facilities here are entirely inadequate for service men, he said, and asked if churches might be able to donate space where toilet facilities and supervision of the men are available. Many men are forced to seek benches on which to sleep over the weekend, he said.

Last week, on a rainy night, the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest, had to turn away 400 men from their weekly party, Miss Mabel Cook, USO director there, stated. More than 900 men were accommodated, she said, asking if there is any way an interchange of information might be had as to where other parties are going on.

Miss Saida Hartman, of the rooms registry, District Council of Civilian Defense, said that 75 per cent of the new Government employes coming to town are girls around 18 years of age. They are "scared to death," she said, and need the "anchorage of a church."

She, too, told of the lack of rooming facilities and asked that more church people open up their homes to these girls. They can take in as many as three without getting a permit to operate as a rooming house, she said. Women are needed as rooming inspectors for this agency.

Dr. Thomas R. Wilson, chairman of the defense commission presided at the meeting.

Final Court Merger Vote Due Today

Senate Is Expected To Act on Conferees' Report on D. C. Bill, Accepted by House

Final Congressional action on the District court merger bill is expected in the Senate today following acceptance of the conferees' report on the measure by unanimous consent of the House yesterday.

By its action the House agreed that two of the ten judges of the proposed new Municipal Court may reside outside the District. All three members of the new Municipal Court of Appeals bench must have lived in the District for at least five years.

The measure provides that all the judges of both courts must have practiced law in the District for at least five years.

The measure provides that all the judges of both courts must have practiced law in the District for at least five years.

Introduced in the House and completely revised in the Senate, the bill to speed up the efficiency of the District's lower courts would:

Combine the present Police and Municipal Courts under the single head of the new Municipal Court, though still keeping their functions separate.

Raise the limitation on civil cases in the Municipal Court from $1000 to $3000, thus relieving the crowded docket of the United States District Court.

Permit appeal as of right from the Municipal Court to the Municipal Court of Appeals.

Girl and Boy Beat Woman, Take Purse

Mrs. J. B. Rowe, 85, of 2038 Allen Place Northwest, was assaulted by two youngsters and robbed of her purse in front of her home last night, police reported. She was taken to Casualty Hospital suffering from an arm fracture and shock.

Police said the woman was beaten by a girl about 13 and a boy about 8, both Negroes. Her purse contained about $5, police reported.

Those Old Frontier Days Still Pack Mighty Wallop

The Case of 'Hoot' Gibson Sort of Proves It; C. U. Clarifies 'Athaliah' Playing Dates; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

THE PUBLIC, it seems, does not forget. Take the case of "Hoot" Gibson, for example.

"You'd be amazed," writes Joe Holman, our chief source of information concerning the "Hoot's" forthcoming appearance as star of Col. Eskew's Rodeo at Riverside Stadium, "at the reaction we've had on 'Hoot' Gibson since the publication of your article. Many men in their 30's and upward admit boldly vivid recollections of the silent motion picture star, while the ladies (presumably of corresponding years) coyly admit having heard of him somewhere."

HOOT GIBSON

This is not surprising. The "Westerns" still are among the most popular of the cinema's more violent charades and "Hoot" Gibson's name still belongs up there among the "cowboy" stars who, beginning with "Broncho Billy" Anderson and "Two-Gun" Bill Hart, made them the most notable of the screen's earlier exhibits. Those lads—Art Acord, Tom Mix, Tim McCoy and the rest— stuck pretty rigidly to the quick-trigger traditions of the Old West and didn't bother much with guitars, moonlight serenades and the yet-to-be-invented microphone. They brought to the silver sheet accurate reflection of the rough-and-ready life most of them actually had led. The realism of it all is something that has stuck tenaciously in the public mind. Their legend has grown, rather than diminished.

So it is not to be wondered at that "Hoot" Gibson, who began his career before the cameras as a stunt man and double and grew up with the industry, today, at 46 and with his back in a brace, is a bigger box-office attraction than ever before. Not only have the kids of his day grown up with him from the time he was crowned king of the cowboys at a Pendleton rodeo, but the youngsters of the present are finding in him a fellow whose name they covet for their autograph books.

"Hoot" will be arriving in the Capital no later than next Sunday for a few days of "tuning up" exercises, before breaking out as full-fledged star of Col. Eskew's show. On April 2, two days ahead of the opening, he will be host at that chuck-wagon barbecue to be tossed by "Fog Horn" Clancy on behalf of their boss. There'll be a mob a-waiting for him.

Comes a cordial note from George Pal, originator of those "Puppetoon" comedies we were chortling about in this space a week or so back. The particular object of our enthusiasm was his "Jasper and the Watermelons." "This," says Mr. Pal, "was the sixth in my present series for Paramount, the others being "Western Daze," "Dipsy Gypsy," "Hoola Boola," "Gay Knighties" and "Rhythm in the Ranks." Since "Jasper" happened only to be the first one the local drama desks had caught, we hereby revise our previous appraisal by saying that any of these subjects will be worth walking a mile to see, if novelty is what you are after. Not only any of them, but all of them—on the strength of "Jasper."

It Still Is Not too Late

Catholic University season subscribers, who have just discovered that "Athaliah," with Florence Reed, distinguished actress, as guest star, opened one week earlier than the date specified on the tickets, should be glad to know that four days still remain in which to view this extraordinarily impressive production. The run in the University Theater will continue through Friday night of this week, March 27. The shift in dates was made necessary to clear the way for Walter Kerr's "Art and Prudence," to be revived for a ten-day run, beginning April 8, as the next production by Father Gilbert V. Hartke's Speech and Drama Department.

For the early enlightenment of the buys and gals of the press, "The Courtship of Andy Hardy" is being unspooled today by the Loew interests. More later about who turns out to be his John Alden.

And that reminds me. Carter Barron, Eastern division manager of Loew's, Inc., and "Chic"—Mrs. Barron to you—are leaving this weekend for a Florida vacation to catch the big one that got away from that highstrung Southern gentleman, Sam Galanty, and Sidney Lust, of the Columbia and Lust enterprises, respectively, when they were down there a few weeks ago. Happy angling—and better bring back a snapshot to prove it!

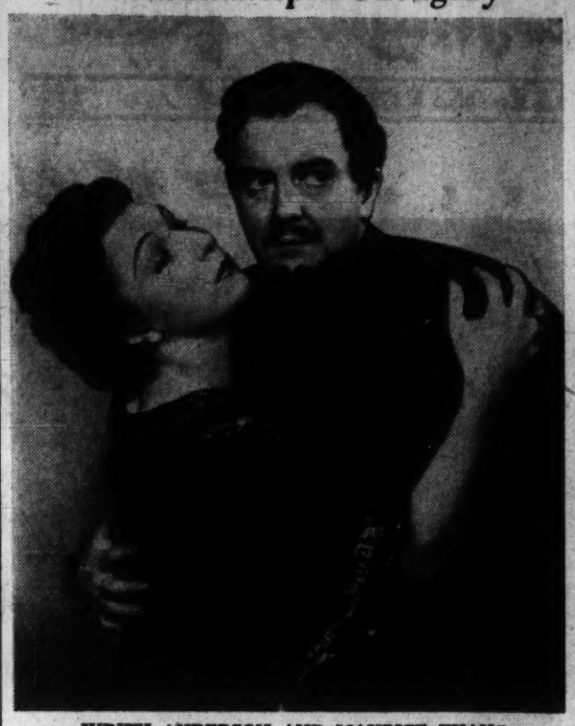
Stars in Shakespeare Tragedy



JUDITH ANDERSON AND MAURICE EVANS as they appear in the costellar roles in "Macbeth," which last night opened its long-awaited week's engagement at the National Theater. This production broke all American records for consecutive performances during its long run on Broadway. A distinguished company supports the stars

The Evans-Anderson 'Macbeth' Season's Highlight at National

By Nelson B. Bell

"MACBETH." Maurice Evans, in association with John Haggott, presents the Shakespeare tragedy in 2 acts and 19 scenes. Staged by Margaret Webster; scenery designed by Samuel Leve, costumes by Lemuel Ayers. Incidental music by Lehman Engel. At the National Theater.

In the National Theater last night the most engrossing performance of Shakespeare's "Macbeth" disclosed on a local stage within the memory of this generation was revealed before a rapt audience that overflowed the last inch of the house.

Read with clarity, richness and a crescendo of dramatic fervor, it was freshened by innovation, accelerated by great technical inventiveness and given the power of living drama by the superb endowments of a brilliant cast, led by Maurice Evans and Judith Anderson, whose presence illuminates and dignifies any play in which they may spear.

The acting version of the tragedy of over-vaunting ambition so skillfully devised by Mr. Evans and Miss Margaret Webster, most distinguished of the contemporary Shakespearean directors, is attuned less to the spirit of physical savagery and an unquenchable blood-lust than to the psychological modulations of two characters driven to delirium and disaster by the desire to achieve before their time the kingly power nebulously prophesied as their reward for heroic service to the crown. It is, in a manner of speaking, an intellectual approach to the drama which so often has been interpreted as a mere study in the inexorable penalties of a brutal and bloodthirsty tyranny.

The conception is so firmly grounded and so adroitly executed that those long acustomed to find in this play only a vast repellance at wanton murder strangely find themselves emotionally moved by feelings of momentary sympathy for the inevitable victims of their own unconscionable treacheries. In the realization of this refreshingly new intent of the play, Mr. Evans and Miss Anderson are especially effective. They lend it forcefulness, integrity and warmth.

A Play of Many Facets

The 19 scenes comprising the two acts, are clearcut and perfectly matched facets that blend harmoniously into a swift-moving and colorful panorama of stirring vignettes that lend the movement of the play extraordinary speed and variety. Many of them mark daring departures from the conventional treatment to which audiences have become accustomed. Particularly is this true of the utilization of the Witches, as an eerie and essential motivation of the action; the banquet scene, in which the presence of the murdered Banquo is indicated merely by a shaft of light, and the deftness with which the sleep-walking scene has been made a true revelation of the inherent frailty in the nature of the wife, who has cajoled, seduced and taunted her husband into deeds that were beyond the power of his own will. These innovations enormously magnify, rather than diminish, the full import of the Shakespeare text.

Miss Webster's technique in staging the work is a bit of a marvel in artistic efficiency. A unit setting capable of seemingly limitless variation, gives quick pace to a succession of dramatic incidents that create an unbroken continuity of speech and action, a compactness and a coherence, heretofore not generally included among "Macbeth's" unobtrusive and indispensable virtues.

To this celerity of tempo, Samuel Leve has added a color treatment that unfailingly accentuates the mood of the scene and Lemuel Ayers has contributed costumes that neither emphasize nor violate the somber note that must dominate a drama celebrating such heinous maneuverings of the human mind and heart.

A Cast of Splendid Balance

Maurice Evans' Macbeth is a figure of such remorseful transgression, expounded with such profound eloquence and clarification, as to belie the suggestion from other centers of culture that he is beneath the physical stature of the role. There would seem to be no plausible basis for the claim that Macbeth must be a physical giant to impart a sense of the enormity of the crimes of which he is guilty. Mr. Evans, by his fine shadings, complete comprehension of the character he is playing and the admirable use of a magnificent voice takes his place among the most impressive of the Thanes.

By a similar exercise of a superb intelligence, Judith Anderson frees Lady Macbeth from the stigma of a masculine brutality and by many delicate touches permits the gentler sensibilities of a woman goaded by an overmastering ambition to mollify a performance that still lacks nothing of vibrance, drive and power. Her sleep-walking scene is a memorable exposition of the mental torture of a woman driven mad by the excesses of a mind hungry for power. It is executed with a haunting and exquisite skill.

Of the others in the cast, all worthy of their full meed of praise, Harry Irvine is a kindly and kingly ruler; Staats Cotsworth, an especially effective Banquo, and Herbert Rudley an appropriately robust and forceful Macduff. As Lady Macduff, Viola Keats presents a moving picture of brief but arresting anguish. None in the cast mars the superior excellence of what must take rank as the dramatic highlight of the season.

HEDDA HOPPER

All-Star Audience

Hollywood, Calif., March 23.—If "Music to My Ears," which opens here April 1, only had the cast of kids who attend the rehearsals and who are helping with its production, it would be but sensational. Those who hang around the theater nightly are Mickey Rooney, because his pal, Sidney Miller, plays the comedy lead; Judy Garland, Jackie Cooper and Linda Darnell—and they're having the time of their young lives. Incidentally, in the show will be Jerry Hillard, harmonica-playing brother of Larry Adler. And did you know that Bob Howard, husband of Andrea Leeds, wants to be an actor? He may start in this show.

ANN SOTHERN

I must tell you the priceless story of a widely known star's butler. A certain old family, having no other dependents than a young niece, decided to give her the best of everything—education, clothes, trip abroad—in fact, the works. So, as is natural in those cases, she met a dapper, hand-kissing foreigner, married him, then brought him home for her aunt's approval. The aunt, being a good, old-fashioned American, wasn't used to those heel-clicking habits and decided to do a little investigating. She found out that the man who was posing as having a title was in reality working as Gracie Allen's butler!

I'll bet our stars, directors, and producers will be more careful next year to save up for Uncle Sam. Some of them were caught so short that one I know of, who makes a $3000 weekly salary, gets $500 of it—the rest going to Uncle Sam until his income tax is paid up.

Ann Sothern, whose character of "Maisie" has become a byword, finally got so tired of that dime store jewelry that she's whittled it down to two jingle bracelets for each arm.

Helene Costello, who's been in a sanitarium for three years, is trying to make a comeback in "The Pride of the Yankees" . . . Warners is testing Jean Tennyson, a C. B. S. singer.

Wait until you get a load of Mae West's new figure. She's taken off 20 pounds and is still dieting. Most of it came off with a certain kind of exercise. No, she wouldn't tell me about it. She's at the signing point with Metro for a new picture.

Have you heard of the producer who went with the same girl 12 years, and when she finally suggested they'd better get married, he turned on her and said, "Good Lord—who in their right minds would marry either one of us."

When the victory committee decided, because there were so many important radio shows lined up for the stars, that "Nobody's Children" might have to be cut off the list, Barbara Stanwyck and Jack Benny said, "Nothing doing! If we don't do anything else, we'll do 'Nobody's Children.'" Barbara got her boy through that program. And Jack Benny says, "Our own unfortunate children must be taken care of, no matter what happens."

LEONARD LYONS

As I Was Saying—!

New York, March 23.

Arthur Kober, the playwright, lectured his wife about her chronic forgetfulness, last week. This lecture was delivered while they were in a taxi, on their way home. When they arrived, and entered the foyer of the apartment house, Kober continued to admonish her, concluding with: "You musn't be so forgetful. A person who expects to amount to something in this world just can't be forgetful" . . . They had to wait for the elevator man, who had rushed out to get a passkey from the doorman. He returned, took the Kobers to their floor and then gave the passkey to their next-door neighbor who was waiting in the hallway because he had forgotten the key to his apartment—Wendell Willkie.

LUISE RAINER

Sinclair Lewis has abandoned the play he was writing. He's rturning to the Midwest next week, and will finish the novel he started last year . . . The National Association of Broadcasters will permit the radio networks to become active members, instead of associates members . . . Arthur Godfrey, the broadcaster, was instructed to fly to New York on Wednesday, to meet with the officials of an insurance company interested in sponsoring his morning programs. Godfrey flew to New York, and at the end of a two-hour session he not only was hired—but he also had purchased from them the largest policy ever issued by that company.

This is a story which came from Vichy: A French minister awoke one morning and complained of indigestion. There were only two doctors available—one British, the other Nazi. He was worried about the diplomatic proprieties—by his indigestion became too painful, and so he called for the doctor whose office was nearer—the Britisher . . . When the minister recovered, the Nazi representatives made due protests with the Vichy government, about this flagrant insult to Nazi medicine. The patient was called to task, for having created this incident. "I'll fix it," he vowed. "I'll just call the Nazi doctor to treat me" . . . "But your indigestion is cured," he was reminded . . . "True," confessed the perplexed minister, "but now I have a terrific headache."

The Provincetown Theater will be reopened in two months. The Playhouse has been preserved by the owners, who built new apartments above and around it—making it the only structure in the city in which a theater and dwellings have been combined . . . Maurice English, who is Irish, will make three broadcasts a week, via N. B. C. to England—similar to the J. B. Priestley broadcasts to this country . . . An actor who can sing French dialogue can get a job with Chateau Martin wines, singing their "I Am Nuts About the Good Old Oo-Ess-Ay" radio transcriptions. A one-week appearance in a New York theater also is guaranteed . . . Luise Rainer has rejected the role of the Chinese wife, in Paul Muni's movie. She's determined first to lick the Broadway stage.

The Federal officials are collecting a Who's Who of potential fifth columnists from some of the back copies of the Japanese-American Review. The issue of October 5, 1940, had an unsigned article concerning the threatened American embargo. In it the writer stated that the new Axis alliance "means that Japan has entered the war, and overnight she can make a sudden attack on the United States. Formal declarations of war are no longer in style" . . . 11-year old Douglas Croft, who just finished playing George M. Cohan, the boy, has been signed to play young Lou Gehrig, in "Pride of the Yankees."

Judge Sam Leibowitz invited Tallulah Bankhead to visit his courtroom, and told her he was anxious for her to do it. "If you really were anxious," said Tallulah, "you'd have gotten yourself elected to night court—to suit my hours" . . . Phyllis Fraser, who is the wife of Book-Publisher Bennett Cerf, is editing the new "Mother Goose" book for the rival publishers, Simon & Schuster . . . Walter Duranty's new book will be called "Search for a Key" . . . Jay Allen will lecture at Town Hall on "Pattern for Treason" . . . Danny Kaye, star of "Let's Face It," told George Jessel: "You're the wittiest man I ever met. You're my favorite actor." "In that case," said Jessel, "send over some people from your balcony to mine."

When Mrs. Maxim Litvinoff posed for the cameramen, at Hesketh's sculpture show, she carried the book, "Dark Legend," and told the photographers to mention the book in the caption. "Dark Legend" was written by the psychiatrist, Dr. Frederic Wertham—who is Kesketh's husband . . . At Conde Nast's party to Ilka Chase—to celebrate her new book, "Past Imperfect" Geoffrey Hellman, the profile writer, met the only two of his subjects who ever threatened to sue him—Sherman Fairchild and Norman Bel Geddes . . . Warren Pierce, the Chicago Times' editorial writer, will head a large bureau at the Coordinator of Information.

Actors Make Good In Armed Service

Hollywood—Hundreds of Hollywood actors who have gone into the Army or the California State Guard are making excellent soldiers, according to word filtering back to the studio lots.

Donald Kerr, actor who is working in "The Gay Sisters" at Warner Bros., confirmed this opinion in a talk with Barbara Stanwyck, one of the stars of the film, when she asked him about his State Guard activities.

"My sergeant," Kerr explained, "thought that the half dozen actors in his company had had previous military training. But we had drilled only in service films.

"Another thing, picture players are accustomed to taking orders. When a director says something, we do it. That habit comes in handy in any branch of the military service."

Famous Stars Entertain Army

Hollywood.—Thanks to the boys at Fort MacArthur, Calif., there'll be a new vaudeville team—Ann Sothern and Red Skelton.

The "Maisie" of screen fame is a frequent visitor at the camp and recently she mentioned that she and Red were costarring in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new "Maisie." Immediately, the boys asked her to bring Red down with her.

But Skelton and Miss Sothern are doing better than that. They're working up a song and dance skit and will put on a "two-man" show.

Repass' Error Helps Browns Beat Nats in 12th

West Virginia, West Kentucky Win in Garden

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

A TRUE LOVE FOR BASEBALL

Orlando, Fla., March 23.—Mr. Donald Barnes, who is the heaviest stockholder in the St. Louis Browns, professes a love for baseball, and it must be love. The Browns' stockholders have taken a rap of $100,000 a year for the five years since the Philip Ball estate decided to get out of the baseball business, and it has been an expensive affection for Mr. Barnes.

POVICH

In everything else, Barnes has been an excellent businessman. He migrated to St. Louis as a lad of 21, borrowed a little ready cash and is now president of the second largest personal loan company in the United States. His banking agencies comprise a network of 78 cities. "I'll never get back what I've put into baseball," he was saying today, "and as a businessman I guess I should get out of it, but I'm too much of a fan."

The president of the Browns doesn't take a dime from the club in salary, moreover. When he travels with the team it is at his own expense. His hotel and transportation bills are segregated from the club's and are met by his own personal check when he is billed by the club's auditor. "I don't know why I should serve without pay," says Barnes, "I guess I'm not a good businessman."

It is Barnes' pride that the club under his control has never sold a ballplayer for cash. "We've traded plenty of players and made a lot of deals, but I don't want it to be said that I let the fans of St. Louis down for cash. They had enough of that sort of thing when the Ball estate owned the club. When the Browns lost money in those seasons, the club got even by selling its good ballplayers. They wiped out one $100,000 deficit by selling Rick Ferrell to the Red Sox for that much money.

Barnes Slices Off $30,000 Expense

Barnes is not such a bad baseball businessman, however, that he is not above economizing. He fired the club's publicity man and his three-man scouting staff during the past winter. He simply saw no need for a press agent, but his discharge of his scouts was founded on a rather bright idea that baseball scouts in these times were rather useless.

"We had three scouts for several seasons and it cost us around $30,000 a year to maintain them," Barnes was saying. "Why we should pay that sort of money in a war year I don't know, so we got rid of them. A baseball scout in these times is simply digging up talent for Uncle Sam to grab, and it's pure waste. We've got three farm teams and working agreements with three smaller clubs and there are some pretty good scouts among the managers on those teams. . . . They'll give us just as much talent as our scouts would."

Barnes is the man who came up with the bright idea that the St. Louis franchise in the American League should be moved to Los Angeles. "That was no wild dream," he says, "and I think we could have put it over except for the war. It never came to a league vote because while we were talking it over in a Chicago hotel on Sunday, December 7, we got reports of Pearl Harbor. We heard those wild rumors that Los Angeles and Frisco were being bombed and that the New York schools were being evacuated, and of course my Los Angeles idea went out of the window.

"But I was ready to lay a pretty good proposition before the American League and I think the club owners would have approved transferring the franchise to the coast. I had airline and train schedules figured out. Ten hours flying time and only 39 hours on the fast train service from Chicago. A club coming to Los Angeles could play a night game on arrival and miss only one day in the schedule. We were ready to show the American League a schedule that would work out."

Figured Los Angeles From All Angles

Businessman Barnes was not going into Los Angeles with blind faith that the city would support a major league club. "You know," he said, reverting to his banker calling, "that Los Angeles is fourth best dollar market in the United States. They could support a major league team out there. We went thoroughly into the arrangements before the war called 'em off.

"Phil Wrigley had agreed to lease us the Los Angeles' club's field and we would have made matters right with the Coast League for invading their territory. The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce had guaranteed us a home attendance of 500,000 a year for the first three years and that's almost twice as much as the Browns drew at St. Louis last season. The other clubs would have benefitted even with the increase in the cost of traveling expenses. Then came the war."

Barnes is sort of hepped up about his 1942 ball club, incidentally. He was beginning to vision it at the end of last season as the best St. Louis team since 1929 when the club finished in the first division. Under his new manager, Luke Sewell, the Browns played .500 ball from June 5, the date Sewell replaced Fred Haney. Only the Yankees and the Cleveland Indians had an edge on the Browns for the year's play. In 22 games with each club, they broke even with the Nats, White Sox and Tigers, and beat the daylights out of the second-place Red Sox, winning 14 and losing only 8.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, March 23.—What interests you?

BOXING?—Unless Jack Blackburn, razor-creased trainer of Joe Louis, makes a semimiraculous recovery from pneumonia, Louis will fight Abe Simon Friday night without benefit of Blackburn for the first time in his professional career.

CONSIDINE

Blackburn has been called Louis' Svengali. Granted that Louis had tremendous natural talent, Blackburn is responsible for harnessing it. His absence may possibly worry Louis a little, for the champ has come to depend heavily on the quick-spoken, out-of-the-corner-of-the-mouth old warrior. Blackburn knows more about Louis than any other man, including Louis. "He knows when I'm ready, even if I don't," Louis told us the other day at Fort Dix. "He sees little mistakes that I don't even know I'm making . . . like holding my hands too low, or moving the wrong way. I hope he makes it Friday night . . ."

From his Chicago hospital, Blackburn okayed Louis' six rounds of daily boxing at Fort Dix. Usually Louis boxes only four rounds in training, but he wanted to box six, for Simon. Blackburn, informed of Louis' weight, gave his permission to Julian Black, who in turn phoned on to Fort Dix.

There's a rather touching relationship between Blackburn, the tough and crafty old battler, and the big open-faced champion. They call each other "chappie," and when Blackburn touches Louis or rubs him, he does it with the deft and loving hands of a sculptor who touches his own work. Blackburn was ill before the start of the Louis-Buddy Baer fight, for Navy relief, and didn't want to go into Louis' corner. He felt he couldn't walk up and down the steps for each round.

"You'll only hafta do it once," Joe promised him.

FOOTBALL?—We're wondering if any game has given up as many of its headliners to the armed services as the gridiron sport. Hundreds of professional and collegiate players are in uniform, ranging from a dozen men off the Champion Chicago Bears to representatives of the least-known school team. Coaches Bernie Bierman, Fritz Crisler, Jim Crowley, Sam Barry, Harvey Harman and others will help train future Navy pilots. Jock Sutherland and many others have applied for such work.

Lieut. Tom Hamilton, former Navy coach, will be in charge of the Navy pilot athletic training. It's an interesting program. The Navy is going to take 30,000 young men a year into its air force, and each one will go through a three-month physical training period before he even sees a plane or cracks an aircraft textbook. Those who can't stand the sports gaff will be cast aside. The Navy figures it might lose a few fine piloting prospects that way, but on the other hand the system will toughen the others for all kinds of combat flying.

The program is being counted on to build up the aggressive spirits of the men, sharpen their reflexes, teach them how to "take it," and finally to send them into Navy plane schools in top physical condition. We shared a mistaken general opinion that aviation demanded a delicate touch. "It does," our friend, Everett Morris, the sportswriter, who will enter the Navy to assist in this work, tells us, "but it also calls for real he-men. You take an awful beating in modern fighting planes and high-speed bombers. You've got to be tough to take it, too."

A's Win on Error By White Sox, 7-6

Los Angeles, March 23 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics defeated the Chicago White Sox 7 to 6 today in ten innings. A hurried throw by Murrel Jones, Sox first sacker, which Harvey Johnson, rookie second baseman, failed to handle let Richardson score the winning run.

Richardson had walked and was sacrificed to second by Pete Suder. Tom Turner, Sox catcher, hit a home run with two mates aboard in the fifth. Bob Johnson hit a home run for the A's in the second.

Bordagaray Sold To N. L. Dodgers

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 23 (AP). Stanley (Frenchy) Bordagaray, utility outfielder with the New York Yankees last season, was sold to the Brooklyn Dodgers of the National League today for cash and an undisclosed player.

Bordagaray was sent to the Yankee farm at Kansas City during the winter, but had refused to report. He formerly played with Brooklyn, Cincinnati and the St. Louis Cardinals.

3d Sub Kayoes Kenner on Arena Card

By Tony Neri

Turner's Arena was the scene last night of a wild and wolly boxing card which had the 1400 paid customers on edge as three clean knockouts and a "no contest" bout supplied a merry night of excitement.

It also provided a startling upset to the career of Jabbo Kenner, giant colored heavyweight, who was chilled by a substitute for a substitute for a substitute in one of the headline attractions.

In the other cofeature, Carl Guggino, of Hartford, Conn., won a close decision over Abie Kauffman of Philadelphia. The fight was fast for the entire eight rounds. Guggino weighed 137½ and the loser scaled 134.

Al Blake, a Baltimore boy who substituted for Julio Ortensio exploded the Jabbo Kenner bubble when he smashed Washington's No 1 heavyweight (commission rankings) to the deck seven times, three times for counts of nine, twice for eight, and once for six, the latter time being saved by the bell, before finally winning in the fourth round by a knockout.

Kenner, winner of his last two fights by one-round knockouts, had his hands full from the opening bell. The 190-pound Blake all but chased Jabbo out of the ring and on the last knockdown Kenner was just too exhausted to rise.

Odds Layers Suffer

In that first session Blake came out of a clinch and smashed a steady stream of leather to the giant Kenner's chin. The Washington heavyweight toppled to the floor and rolled over face to the floor. He barely managed to get up as the bell intervened. The second round was a repetition of the first with Blake doing the throwing and Kenner the catching.

Blake, the third substitute, was an 8-1 underdog in the betting and the lacing he administered to Jabbo was doubly disastrous if the wails of the favorite bettors is any criterion. Both Kenner and the odds-layers took terrific beatings. Kenner was tops in one department, he outweighed his foe, coming in at 213 to Blake's 190.

Billy Duffy, former Villanova boxer, gained a unanimous decision in a 6-rounder previous to the Kenner-Blake match by outslugging Sammy Daniels, of Baltimore. Duffy, chief petty officer of the Naval Air Station at Anacostia, had things his own way throughout.

Mauriello Stops Cooper in Third

Mel Ott Is Desperate; Will Start Reserves

Miami, Fla., March 23 (AP).—The New York Giants got the day off today and Manager Mel Ott said he would start the second string against the Philadelphia Phillies tomorrow in hopes of breaking the losing streak that has stretched to seven in a row.

"I know that we are a better ball club than our 11 defeats in 13 games indicates," added Ott, "but we are trying so hard to win that everyone is pressing and the timing is off."

Youngest Squad Answers Call To Spring Practice at G. W.

Majority of Candidates Reporting Are Under 20 Years of Age; Mostly Freshmen Are Out

One of the youngest squads with which he has ever worked reported to Coach Bill Reinhart, George Washington University mentor, as the Colonials' spring football training started yesterday at West Potomac Park. But optimism was the keynote, nevertheless.

"We're going to have a raw crew," Reinhart admitted, "but we won't be alone. The war situation is going to produce youthful elevens all over the country—probably the most youthful in history."

"The draft is dipping so deeply into the older group of boys that by playing time next year no team will have more than two or three boys over 20 years of age. We'll be no exception, by any means."

A glimpse at the assorted gang cavorting down by the Lincoln Memorial bore out Reinhart's prediction. The team statistician revealed that 25 of the 35 odd players out there are freshmen now, but will enjoy sophomore rating by next fall. Approximately half the 1942 starting line-up will be made up of these same second-year men, with perhaps a few first-year men thrown in.

The Colonials' hopes of using a few well-chosen freshmen in next year's grid battles now hinge on a recommendation of Southern Conference coaches to a Southern Conference faculty committee. Unless the whole circuit to which the G-Streeters attached themselves last year revokes the frosh rule, G. W. must, of course, do without the questionable aid of freshman footballers.

Of particular interest to all Colonial coaches yesterday was the crop of potential backfield men which turned out. Johnny Baker, former G. W. U. ace and Washington-Lee High leader, heads these, but Line Coach Ray Hanken and even Trainer George Lentz looked on carefully.

Harder Is Signed By Tribe, Making Comeback Official

By the Associated Press

Clearwater, Fla., March 23.—The comeback of Mel Harder, 32-year-old pitching veteran, became official today when he was signed to a Cleveland contract.

HARDER

The right-hander was given his unconditional release last fall after 14 years with the Indians, but accompanied them to their training camp this spring in the hope his pitching arm had been restored to usefulness by an operation on his elbow. The soreness caused by bone chips is gone, and Harder has hurled for eight innings in two exhibtion games.

General Manager Roger Peckinpaugh said the veteran was signed "to a conditional contract. The better he pitches and the more games he wins the more money he will get."

Error Helps Browns Beat Nats in 12th

4 Rookie Hurlers Hold Nats to Five Hits; Clift's Triple Scores Winning Run

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Orlando, Fla., March 23.—The mighty Nats flunked out today. They got licked by the St. Louis Browns who nudged over a twelfth-inning run to win a 2-1 ball game at Tinker Field. Shortstop Bob Repass muffed Pitcher Ewald Pyle's grounder to open the twelfth and a bit later Harland Clift tripled into right field, and it was home, James, with the winning run.

In both the tenth and eleventh the Nats squandered scoring opportunities in a manner to make Manager Bucky Harris take a bite out of a bat. They were held to two hits in the first nine innings of the ball game and couldn't get a run home on two occasions, with runners on second and none out.

The ignominy of it all was that the men who held the Nats to five hits and shut 'em out in the last 11 innings of the ball game were four of the Browns' rookie pitchers. Guys the Nats scarcely heard of, Clarence Iott, a righthander from Paragold, Ark.; Loy Henning, a southpaw late of San Antonio; Stan Ferrens, a righthander from Columbus, Ga., and Pyle, a lefthander from San Antonio, whomped 'em.

There was satisfaction, though, for Manager Bucky Harris in the performance of his own pitchers with the exception of Bill Zinser, who pitched the twelfth inning and lost the game. Jack Wilson shut the Browns out for five innings and then volunteered to pitch the sixth. He overestimated himself. In that sixth the Browns tied the score at 1 to 1.

Big Phil McCullough, the right-hander who is pitching himself right onto the staff, turned in the day's best performance. McCullough held the Browns hitless for five innings before Zinser got the job in the twelfth. The Nats were sort of lucky to be in the ball game

Maxim Is Victor In Baltimore Bout

Baltimore, March 23 (AP).—Joey Maxim, Cleveland heavyweight, took a split decision over Louis Brooks, Wilmington, Del., Negro, in a fast 10-round fight tonight.

Brooks started fast but slowed down after the first three rounds and couldn't meet the pace Maxim set. Maxim weighed 178¼; Brooks, 180¾.

Georgians Hit Plan to Drop Grid Program

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, March 23.—A move to suspend intercollegiate football at the University of Georgia and Georgia Tech brought fresh controversy tonight to the State's university system.

In Washington, L. W. (Chip) Roberts, member of the board of regents, announced he would offer a resolution suspending football for the war's duration at the board's next meeting.

Asked if he agreed with Robert, Gov. Eugene Talmadge invited questioners to "be at the next meeting of the regents," and added:

"We're doing everything for winning the war, if it takes putting our debutantes to hoeing potatoes." He said the board might meet next month.

Available members of the 16-man board were divided. Chairman Sandy Beaver and two others indicated opposition, two were undecided, and two indicated they might vote for suspension.

Robert said he anticipated support from Chancellor S. F. Sanford of the university system, who backed suspension of football at the University of Georgia in the first World War. Dr. Sanford, however, said he was opposed to football abandonment in the present conflict, adding:

Well-Trained Men Needed

"Army and Navy officers . . . want young men trained in college so that they will be tough when they start training for specific branches of the service. More college youths participate in football. It is the best physical training they get."

W. A. Alexander, Georgia Tech athletic director, said: "Intercollegiate football is being continued at Annapolis and West Point. We even have a game scheduled with the Navy at request of naval officials."

Said Robert, in Washington: "The war we were in in 1917 was just a skirmish compared to this one. If we don't eliminate football ourselves the Government will call on us to do it." Advised that Dr. Sanford did not agree, he demanded, "Then why did he want to do it in 1917?"

The board of regents was involved in controversy last summer when Gov. Talmadge undertook to oust several educators whom he accused of favoring radial coeducation. Robert supported the Governor at that time.

Creighton, Toledo Bow In New York

Mountaineers Win, 51-39; Kentucky Five Beats Midwest Co-Titlists, 49-36

By the Associated Press

New York, March 23.—West Virginia and Western Kentucky State continued the wave of upsets in the National Invitation Basketball Tournament here tonight before a crowd of 17,935 and qualified for Wednesday's finals. The Mountaineers, eighth seeded team, defeated Toledo, 51 to 39, and the Kentuckians won over favored Creighton, 49 to 36.

The Mountaineers, conquerors of Long Island's defending champions in the first round, gave a great exhibition of shooting and ball handling in downing the favored Ohioans.

After the score had been tied eight times, the West Virginians pulled away to a 24-21 lead at the half and then held command through the second period with Rudy Baric doing a great job of throttling Toledo's Bob Gerber, who set a new Garden record of 37 points against Rhode Island State.

Gerber connected with 14 points to set Toledo's offensive pace but only 10 of them came from field goals and they were all in the first half. He was held to three free throws in the second period as Baric consistently broke up his pivot shots.

Baric High-Scorer

Baric, operating effectively underneath the back board, and Roger Hicks, a Deadeye Dick with set shots, were high for West Virginia with 16 and 12 points, respectively, but the triumph was distinctly a team victory. Scotty Hamilton again gave a great exhibition of ball handling and play-making, especially in the second half when the Mountaineers built up a 40-30 lead in the first 10 minutes.

Dick Kesling, high scorer of West Virginia's first-round victory, was held without a field goal but cashed in on 7 straight free throws as the Mountaineers matched their 17 field goals with as many charity points.

DeKalb Scores as Favored Augury Runs Last at Tropical

Bull Reigh Is Second to $9.10 Shot

Porter's Cap Takes Third Money in Mud; Victor Wins by Head After Stiff Battle

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 23.—Neil S. McCarthy's Augury, a California refugee which equaled the 1:10 6-furlong track mark here in her only previous Florida appearance of the winter, today ran last as a 3-to-4 favorite in the featured Biscayne Purse, a 6-furlong test which drew only four starters because of the muddy condition of the racing strip.

William Hirschensohn's De Kalb, a consistent early-season winner and hero of a pair of handicaps at Hialeah Park, returned to his best form in today's headliner and lasted to score by a head over Mrs. Tony Pelleteri's Bull Reigh. C. S. Howard's Porter's Cap lost the place by a length and a half while beating Augury a like distance. The winner was timed in 1:12 and returned $9.10.

When the small field paraded to the post, the crowd of 6376 was surprised to see veteran Jockey Bob Wholey, Augury's rider, with white tape covering most of his face from the nose down. A track spokesman explained that Wholey had had all of his upper teeth extracted and wanted to keep mud and the wind from entering his mouth. Wholey had only one mount today, and was late in reporting for that one.

De Kalb, known for his high turn of speed, broke very fast and soon had a lead of four lengths. He raced Augury into defeat before being tackled by Bull Reigh through the stretch. The latter gained rapidly in the final sixteenth, but "Red" Howell kept De Kalb going just long enough. Porter's Cap wore down the fatigued Augury in the last 70 yards.

Couple of Haights Getting Ready for Bowie

Jockey Kees Dies As Result of Fall

Chicago, March 29 (AP).—Hubert Kees, 29, veteran free-lance jockey, who had done most of his riding on the smaller tracks, died today after a long illness following an accident at Sportsman's Park last October 17.

Kees suffered a spinal injury when his mount, Magic Winnie, stumbled as the field was going into the turn from the back stretch at the half-mile track. He is survived by his wife and two children.

Walks Help, a Little

Jackie Harrell pounded out the only two hits for the Georgetown Prep Midgets yesterday, but the St. Anne's Cardinals' hurlers were a trifle wild and the Prepsters won, 9-4, on the winner's diamond.

Kenner K. O. Victim Before 1400 at Arena

Duffy scaled 150 and Daniels weighed 143.

The Ortensio-Kenner match was thrown out when the commission doctor found Ortensio physically unfit at the 2 o'clock weighing-in. The out-of-towner was allowed to rest until 7 in the evening and then examined again. His blood pressure was very much off, and in addition he came here with a badly inflamed eye.

Ortensio was signed as a substitute for Marty Clark, who in turn was subbing for Joe Carilli, Kenner's original opponent.

The earlier portion of the card provided three knockouts, but only two go down in the records as such. The Roscoe Perry-Johnny Taylor scrap was ruled no contest by Referee Charlie Reynolds. In that match, Perry, 138½ of Washington, knocked Taylor, of Baltimore, to the canvas twice for an eight count and another of three. On the next knockdown, Reynolds stepped in and called the fight "no contest." Taylor's purse was withheld until a commission ruling disposes of it. The fight was stopped in the opening round of a scheduled four.

In a sensational light-heavyweight bout, scheduled for six heats, Gus Mirmon, former Columbus University boxer, knocked out Otis Harris after 40 seconds of the second round. Both boys are from Washington. Harris had been saved by the bell in the first round, only to be met by powerful left roundhouses which soon spelled the end for Harris. Mirman scaled 171½ and Harris weighed 165. It was Mirman's second straight victory in the paid ranks, the former Explorer having won over Powerhouse Johnson a month ago.

Louis Great In Prefight Spar Session

By the Associated Press

Fort Dix, N. J., March 23.—If Joe Louis has slowed down, as some of the best of the ballyhoo boys would have you believe, then they should have let him work out in a dark corner today, where no prying eyes could get a peek.

Because the Bomber, beginning his last three days of work for his emergency relief row with ample Abe Simon in Madison Square Garden Friday night, was about as slow as a flying fortress—and just as deadly. He dished out an assortment of gaudy bloody noses in a four-round workout with George Fitch, Eddie Blunt and George Nicholson and was so smooth doing it that you felt kind of sorry for ample Abe.

The main attraction of the 1204th special service unit put on his display after going through a stiff physical examination which not only pleased Uncle Sam's Army, but actually had Lieut. Bernard Robbins, of the Medical Corps, gasping in awe at the heavyweight championship machinery.

In Top Shape

The examination was so rigid even John J. Phelan, the New York State Athletic Commission chairman who has had Joe looked over for every one of his New York fights, admitted he had "never seen anything like it."

You can imagine, then, how both Phelan and Lieut. Robbins felt when after discovering what made Louis tick, and how well, they saw him dishing out his dynamite. He warmed up on Fitch, then made Blunt leave, his nose dripping blod, in the middle of the second round, and polished off the festivities on Nicholson.

Joe weighed 211 when they turned him loose and 208 when the party was over. He figures on scaling about 206 Friday night, which is three-quarters of a pound lighter than he was for Buddy Bear in January, but plenty heavy to tear a wall down or a fighter apart.

Meantime, it was learned that Larry Amadee, who worked in Joe's corner for all his fights up to his get-together with John Henry Lewis three years ago, would be on hand to replace the ailing Jack Blackburn. Chappie is in a Chicago hospital and will be missing from the Bomber's destruction squad for the first time since Louis' amateur days. Mannie Seamon and Joe's comanager, Julian Black, will round out the trio.

Joe will finish up his spar work tomorrow and Wednesday, then train up to New York for the official weigh-in the morning of the fight. As usual, he's making no prediction other than that he'll wind it, "as soon's I ketch him."

Iowa, Kentucky Service Elevens To Meet Buckeyes

Columbus, Ohio, March 23 (AP).—Football teams from the Naval Aviation Cadet Training Center at Iowa City, Ia., and the Army post at Fort Knox, Ky., received an unofficial nod today as the most likely service elevens to play Ohio State University here this fall.

L. W. St. John, Buckeye athletic director, indicated the Naval Cadet team coached by Bernie Bierman, former Minnesota mentor, was virtually assured as an opponent. A game with Fort Knox is likely, he added.

Both games with service teams will be played in Columbus with part of the proceeds going to service organizations, St. John said.

Selections at Tropical Park

Dear Al:

There's no time like spring around a race track. I went out to Bowie yesterday. A sharp north wind was blowing and there was plenty of nip in the air, punctuated now and then by snow flurries. But the calendar said it was spring and so did faces everywhere. Everybody seemed to have that "It can't be long now" look. Yes Bowie is wide awake now. Stable boys laugh and kid each other as they jog around the track holding ambitious steeds. Trainers stand around and smile, and the man rubbing the horse over in Barn R hums to himself as he works. Winter has been forgotten. So has that horse that was beaten a nose—the one that would have made the lull months bright. It doesn't matter now about January, February and early March. What if there had to be a lot of hustling and scuffling to keep mouths fed? What if there were cold nights? What if a fellow did have to run up a bill at the track kitchen or write to relatives for cash to tide him over? Those things don't count now. This is spring and—well it's only a week to the Bowie opening. Every man around the track, and every boy, too, has some horse "on his feed" and "ready for the best." Some simply dream of a killing just around the corner. There are those who aren't talking much because they don't want to hurt the price. Others are boastful. They laugh as they tell of fast workouts. They are just as happy as if they were approaching the payoff window to collect. Yes, the miseries have gone out of many an old fellow's back around Bowie It's spring and there's plenty of spring in the legs of those fresh horses. There'll be big, juicy checks waiting at the secretary's office for those who can get their horses home on top. During the ten days of the Bowie meeting there can only be 80 winners. But there are 400 horses there now that "can't miss." BILL.

First race—YARD ARM appears the best of those gathered for the day's opener. Needs only the right ride. HELEN'S BOY has a good figure and belongs close. MERRY MEDFORD for the show end.

Second race—SUN GIRL goes for all the money in this field. Promises to do a lot of running and I'm going to string along. HIGHSCOPE is a fair sort and is dangerous. TETRATOWN to take care of the minor money.

Third race—CHATLET will be a keen factor if not the winner in this event. This one has worked good enough to take it all and I'm going to take my chances. HIS SHADOW and TETE-A-TETE for the place and show.

Fourth race—OLDWICK is better than generally rated and deserves a top selection in this company. BILLY O. belongs in the first flight in a field of this kind. BATTER UP is likely to hold the others safe.

Fifth race—VOTUM probably is the best of this lot. Needs only a share of the racing luck to account for first money. WEISENHEIMER has good races to recommend and will be in the thick of contention. REMOTE CONTROL should be a money factor.

Sixth race — MASTER KEY appears a solid bet in this company. Has downed this kind before and I see no reason for mistakes. IN QUESTION gets a good figure and belongs close with these. DISPLAYER deserves a call in the money circle.

Seventh race—SPREAD EAGLE and BOSTEE fit nicely in this field and I believe they will finish in the order named. CLIP CLOP is not outclassed and belongs in the first three.

Eighth race — The day's finale should go to WAUGH POP. This one likes the route and needs only saddle help. BAYPORT should be at least second. WAR POINT may account for the third position.

Best bet—VOTUM.

in the extra innings, what with the Browns outhitting them, 10-8. George Case and Mickey Vernon were the only Washington athletes to get a hit in the first nine innings. They picked up a run in the first off Iott when Spence and Ortiz drew walks and Vernon singled to center. The Browns tied it in the sixth when Laabs tripled over Spence's head and scored on McQuillen's single.

Little Eddie Lyons got a chance to play second base today and he did all right, what with figuring as the middle man in two fancy double plays, and almost winning another ball game for the club.

Lyons was not battling hero in the seventh when, with the bases loaded by Ferrens' three passes, he struck out with one out, but in the tenth he put the potential winning run on base by banging a single to center for Washington's third hit of the game. He reached second when Ferrens threw wild on Pinch Hitter Pofahl's bunt, but the Nats couldn't get him home from there. Case bunted and Lyons was thrown out at third and the innards went out of the uprising.

Again in the eleventh the Nats had a man on second, with none out, but it was

Medwick for Newsom Trade Rumored as Dodgers Beat Tigers

Yanks' 6-Run 1st Inning Beats Bears

French, Bob Chipman Hold Detroit as Brooklyn Wins, 7-2; Yanks Score, 9-5

By the Associated Press

Lakeland, Fla., March 23.—The Brooklyn Dodgers defeated the Detroit Tigers, 7 to 2, today amid rumors that the National League champions would send Outfielder Joe Medwick to the Motor City nine in exchange for Holdout Pitcher Louis (Bobo) Newsom.

Newsom, mainstay of the Detroit staff in 1940, but winner of only 12 games while losing 20 last year, has refused to sign a contract because of a salary slash. Medwick virtually has lost his outfield berth to Augie Galan, outfielder with the Chicago Cubs last season.

Larry French, Brooklyn lefthander, subdued the Tigers with two hits in the first six innings today and Detroit got both of its tallies off Bob Chipman, rookie hurler, in the seventh on Pinky Higgins' towering homer after Rudy York walked.

Triples by Alex Kampouris and Pete Reiser were the big blows in the early inning assault on Virgil (Fire) Trucks, starting Detroit hurler.

In the ninth, Hal Manders filled the bases on walks and then Lew Riggs singled two runs home. Manager Leo Durocher played the full nine innings at short for the National Leaguers.

Bears Scared

By the Associated Press

Sebring, Fla., March 23.—After the Newark Bears, of the International League, once got over their stage fright in playing the New York Yankees, the minor leaguers outplayed, outbatted and outpitched the world champions today.

However, a six-run outburst in the first inning gave the Yankees margin enough to chalk up a 9-to-5 triumph.

Tom Byrne, young Newark lefthander, issued four walks and allowed three hits—including a double by Pitcher Mel Queen—in a fat first inning to give the Yankees their cushion.

Cards Sweep Series

By the Associated Press

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 23.—The St. Louis Cardinals made a clean sweep of their spring exhibition series with the Cincinnati Reds, climbing on Bucky Walters today to win the third and final game, 5 to 2. Bert Haas hit a home run for the Reds.

The Cardinals' big inning was the fourth when a walk, singles by Estel Crabtree and Erv Dusak, a double by Walker Cooper and a single by Bud Blattner scored three runs off Walters.

Four-Run Homer

Hollywood, Calif., March 23 (AP).—Lou Novikoff's first-inning home run with the bases full started the Chicago Cubs off to a 10-to-4 triumph today over Pittsburgh, and snapped the Pirates' seven-game winning streak.

Stan Hack and Charlie Gilbert singled and Bill Nicholson was purposely passed after Seymour Block's sacrifice bunt to set the stage for Novikoff's big blow off Rip Sewell. Lou drove in two other runs with a double and sacrifice fly and his single helped a two-run rally in the third.

Dodger B's Bow

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 23 (U.P.).—The Boston Braves got 11 hits off Les Werber, Al Sherer and Joe Lochbaum in today's exhibition to defeat the Brooklyn "B" team, 4 to 2. The Dodger reserves were held to six scattered safeties by George Diehl, Jim Wallace and John Hutchings. Brooklyn had one error.

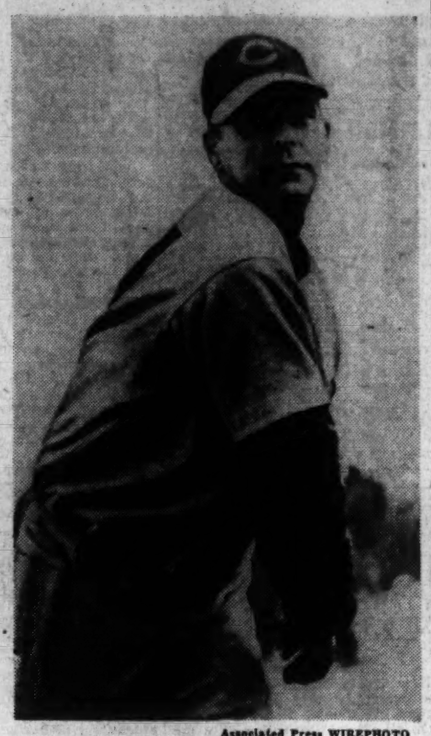
35-Year-Old Red Rookie Looks to 4th Major Trial



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

A veteran hurler of a half-dozen minor leagues and now in his fourth major league trial, Ray Starr is looking for a starting berth on the Reds' mound staff at the age of 35. A father of two children and 3-A in the draft, Starr may be the typical rookie of the year. He won 20 for Indianapolis last year and came up with the Reds in time to add three more

Ray Starr, Always a Winning Pitcher, Has Been in Minors and Majors Since 1926

By Judson Bailey
Associated Press Sports Writer

Tampa, Fla., March 22.—The typical rookie of 1942 may very well be Ray Starr, of the Cincinnati Reds, who is 35 years old, is the father of two children and has been playing baseball for 16 years.

These are war times and a "3-A" draft classification is as important as ability. One is no good without the other. And Starr has both.

His record is one of the strangest of any freshman breaking into the big leagues this spring and one of the strangest features is that he insists the record is wrong.

Starr made his debut in organized baseball at Danville in the 3-I League in 1926 and since then has played with a list of clubs that would shake a train announcer—Marshalltown, Iowa; Topeka, Shawnee, Rochester, Minneapolis, Toronto, Syracuse, Nashville, Fort Worth, Dallas and Indianapolis, in addition to hasty appearances with the St. Louis Cardinals, New York Giants, Boston Braves and now the Cincinnati Reds.

Last year he won 20 games for the weak Indianapolis Indians and then joined the Reds in time to win three and lose two at the end of the season—and also in time to make Manager Bill McKechnie smack his lips with pleasure.

Looking at the record, one wonders how a good pitcher could have kicked, or been kicked, around in the minors for 16 years, and Starr's answer is:

"I'll ask you the same question."

In the beginning Starr had a tendency to wildness and needed plenty of work. When he played at Rochester under Billy Southworth in 1931 he got it with the result that he won 20 games and lost seven. He pitched three double-headers that year and won five of the six games. The encounter that he lost went 14 innings and Starr would have won it too, Southworth recalls, except for an infielder's muff of a double-play ball.

Starr came up to the Cards the next spring to try to elbow his way onto a pitching staff that included Dizzy Dean, Jess Haines, Bill Hallahan and some other fellows whose names will long be remembered. The record shows he got into three games for a total of 20 innings without a decision, but Starr contends that he made only one appearance and pitched a two-hitter to beat Brooklyn, 3-0.

In any case he went back to Rochester, was sold to the Giants, passed along to the Braves and continued his Cook's tour of baseball.

For the last five years he has won anywhere from a dozen to 23 games a year, but probably because of his advancing years none of the major league clubs paid much heed until the war made age a thing of value.

Then Deacon McKechnie, who has touched a magic wand to such other oldsters as Jim Turner, Lou Fette and Paul Derringer, plucked Starr out of obscurity and said he not only was going to give him the chance denied him in the past, but that he was counting on Starr to be one of the mainstays of his mound staff this season.

Starr is determined that he will make good.

La Fond Off For National Fight Meet

With several important ideas in his head, but without backing in the matter of fighters, Catholic University's Coach Eddie LaFond will entrain today for the National Intercollegiate Boxing Association tournament and meeting in Baton Rouge, La.

For the busy, little C. U. fight mentor the trip will probably result in his election to the presidency of the association after a year as vice president. The reason for his failure to enter a team in the tourney is that none of his 1942 sluggers were considered of championship caliber.

Chief of the new ideas La Fond carries to the national get-together concerns the expansion of boxing to high school and prep school circles. He hopes the N. I. B. A. will be able to educate the educators at these institutions in the fact that boxing is highly beneficial instead of injurious to sub-college athletes if supervised correctly. His main talking point will be the fact that Army and Navy athletic heads now consider boxing a prime factor in the preparation of American youth for the war effort.

M. B. S. Gets Exclusive Rights to Air Boxing

New York, March 23 (U.P.).—The top-flight boxing bouts, including championship contests, staged by the Twentieth Century Sportsing Club during the next year will be broadcast by the Mutual Broadcasting System, Promoter Mike Jacobs announced today.

'Pop' Hanbury Boasts 'Family Of Champions'

One of the town's busiest boxing coaches, a man who deserves a lot of credit, but who is consistently overlooked when the palms are passed around, is Lew Hanbury, sr., poppa of the "family of champions" and coach of the Merrick Club team.

Lew, jr., will be one of the principal performers on Friday night's card when the annual District A. A. U. chamionship tournament ends at Turner's Arena with 32 youngsters contesting for novice and open titles. Lew is down for a bout with Pete Cilinski, St. Mary's Club ace, and he's favored to win—by a knockout. This despit all Cilinski's clever ring generalship because Hanbury has a punch and it's sort of an inheritance from his pop who used to be a pro fighter.

Young Hanbury is king of the District's 126-pounders but only one of four titleholders in the family. Others are 7-year-old Jim, 50-pound junior champ; Mac, a 70-pounder, and 105-pound Bill. Their father taught them all to box, and well.

Proteges Show Polish

The elder Hanbury had some experience in friendly bouts before signing up with the United States Navy years ago but it was in the service that he really acquired the fine art of blocking, feinting and counterpunching that he has so successfully imparted to his brood and other members of the Merrick Club. There is more than a hint of professional polish in the way the Hanbury boys handle themselves and they hit like the old gentleman did in his heyday, although Lew disavows any claim of being a puncher.

Hanbury was a prisoner of war in the last conflict, being captured and interned in Westphalia, Germany, when a British plane of which he was a crew member, was shot down during a foray into enemy territory. He transferred to the British service before the United States got into the war, having previously served on the Idaho and Texas battlewagons, the Mississippi and the K-5, a submarine.

He survived the vicissitudes of being captive, subsisting on hardly enough to keep body and soul together, and made an unsuccessful dash for liberty, stowing away on a Norwegian freighter. Brought back he was thrown into solitary confinement in an underground dungeon but still had enough fight left to keep going.

the seventh and eighth seeded teams into the championship round. The Kentuckians, chalking up their fifteenth straight victory, were seeded seventh, and West Virginia eighth among the eight teams that started play last Tuesday.

Creighton, cochampions of the Missouri Valley, stayed in the ball game until the last ten minutes when the Hilltoppers pulled away with Howard and Dero Downing joining lanky Cran McKinney and Sub Ray Blevins in the late scoring drive. Blevins, who paced the Kentuckians to their first round triumph, and McKinney tied for offensive honors with 16 points each.

With Blevins and McKinney hitting, Western Kentucky pulled into a 13-9 lead at the six-minute mark and widened its advantage to 23-16 with five minutes to play in the half. Creighton struck back and left the floor trailing by only two points, 25-23.

Blevins and McKinney again teamed to put the Hilltoppers out in front, 31-23, in four minutes after the start of the final half but back came Creighton to narrow the margin to 35-31. With the score 38-33 and seven minutes to play, the Kentuckians drove through Creighton's shattered defense to roll up the score in the closing minutes.

Garden All-Stars Play Army Quintet For Benefit Fund

By the Associated Press

New York, March 23.—An all-star squad of players chosen from visiting teams in the New York Invitational Baseketball Tourney will oppose a team from the Army Second Corps in a contest at Madison Square Garden Saturday night with the receipts going to the Army Emergency Relief Fund.

In the second half of the doubleheader, Long Island University will oppose City College of New York. The two metropolitan teams were seeded No. 1 and 3, respectively, in the tourney but were eliminated in the first round.

The all-star college five will be chosen from players on the West Texas State, Creighton, Western Kentucky, Toledo University, Rhode Island State and West Virginia rosters.

Epiphany Bows To Calvary, 30-9

Calvary Methodist five almost scored a shutout in the District of Columbia Recreation Basketball League last night at Central gym, swamping Epiphany by a 30-9 score. Other games at the same floor went to Douglas, 34-27, over United Brethren; Mount Vernon by 38-28 over Calvary Baptist; Chevy Chase by 22-20 over Petworth, and Ninth Street Christian by 34-30 over Francis Asbury.

At Eastern B. and B. Farms was never threatened as it routed Joe Boyles, 34-15. Two games at Roosevelt were captured by the Colonials, 25-22, over the Bluejays, and by A. G. O. Publications, 24-19, over War Reserves.

200 Coaches, Sports Figures Start School at Annapolis

Naval Reserves Officers Start 30-Day Classes at Sunrise Today; All on Hand

By Pete Zurlinden
Associated Press Sports Writer

Annapolis, Md., March 23.—It was back to school again today for 200 college coaches and sports personalities who descended on the United States Naval Aacademy from every corner of the Nation.

Recently commissioned Naval Reserve officers to handle the huge V-5 physical fitness program for future gob fliers, they threw their civilian tags into academy lockers for the duration and commenced an intensive 30-day course in learning to look, act and think the "Navy way."

From dawn until late tonight they drifted into Annapolis from wherever they were when called by Uncle Sam. They drilled a bit, received khaki uniforms and then were lectured tonight by academy officials who will direct them during training. The intensive program begins tomorrow with a gym drill shortly after sunrise.

Barry on Hand

Sam Barry, Southern California football, basketball and baseball coach, was one of the first arrivals. Sleepy Jim Crowley, of Fordham, was one of the last. Barry will go on active duty as athletic director of the V-5 program at St. Mary's (Calif.) College whi'e Crowley has been assigned to the Eastern school at the University of North Carolina.

Two former sports writers were in the crowd, Everett Morris, New York Herald Tribune, and Charley Burton, sports editor of the Dallas (Tex.) News. Ben Lee Boynton, named on Walter Camp's all-American football team when he was a Williams star, represented the radio sportscasting fraternity.

Luminaries from the East included Warren Chivers, Dartmouth's famous skiier; Nello Falaschi, New York Giant pro football ace; Gus Zitrides, Cornell's assistant coach; Harvey Harmon, Rutgers, and Maine's Eck Allen.

From Pacific Coast

Pacific Coast representatives were Julie Bescos, Southern California; Bobby Grayson, former Stanford All-American; Leonard Lee Faurot, brother of Missouri's bowl team mentor, Don, who came from Seattle, and Stan Williamson, of Santa Barbara (Calif.) College.

Several From South

Mason-Dixon schools were represented by Larry (Moon) Mullins, Florida backfield coach and former Notre Dame star under Rockne; Paul (Bear) Bryant, Vanderbilt line coach; Jim (Sweet) Lallanne, North Carolina triple-threat of other years; and Mercel (Mac) Thorpe, for 12 years an assistant at Georgia Tech.

The Midwest offered Voe Truskowski, one time Minnesota star, now of Wayne University, Detroit; Wisconsin's Walter Mehl, the last runner to trim Notre Dame's Greg Rice in the mile run; Michigan's Cliff Keen, wrestling coach; Art Jones, sensational pro grid star for the Pittsburgh Steelers last autumn, and Ohio State's Larry Snyder, developer of Jesse Owens and many other Buckeye running greats.

Rex Hartley, British Cup Golfer, Is Dead

London, March 23 (AP).—Rex Hartley, 36, amateur golfer who played twice for Britain against the United States in Walker Cup matches, has died following an accident, it was announce today.

It was understood an inquest would be held to determine the cause of death, the date of which was not given.

Hartley was elected to the British Walker Cup team in 1930 and 1932.

Lanhardt's 410 Set Is First In 25 Years

Charley Lanhardt, of the Carter-Lanhardt team in the Silver Spring-Georgia Avenue Bowling League, was the happiest man on the drives last night with his fine 410 set, the first of his career covering a span of 25 years of league bowling. The count aided his quintet in posting high set of 1727. Fred Prentiss, Jacobsen Flowers, had high single of 157 with high team game of 590 going to Arbaugh's Restaurant, which included a whitewash of Corr's Sport Shop.

Odd Fellows

Clayton Donaldson's 148 for Amity No. 1 and Doc Lewis' 369 for Mount Pleasant topped the Odd Fellows at Brookland with the former's quintet winning a sweep over Columbia No. 1. Donaldson's 365 set and identical efforts by Wally Donaldson and Perce Ellett, and a 362 count by Russ Diehl, supplied the punch. Lewis' count aided Mount Pleasant to high team game of 609 with the Amity No. 1 boys posting a 1759 total for set honors. Earl Steele aided Lewis with near high game of 144. The Amity No. 1 boys head the league by virtue of a five and one-half game margin.

Navy League

Bill Brigham, Commandants, was the best man in the Navy Department League at Arcadia with his 158 single and 413 set although Bill Porter, Signal Corps, came close after posting totals of 150-407. The Hydrographic boys led the teams with a 618 game and 1706 set.

Snead Favored As N.-S. Golf Opens Today

By the Associated Press

Pinehurst, N. C., March 23.—Sammy Snead was back on his game today and a prime favorite to retain his North and South crown as golfdom's transcontinental sweepstakes swung into the stretch of its annual winter campaign.

The North and South, starting tomorrow, and the Masters at Augusta early next month—the two most prized baubles of the winter trek—and $20,000 in cash lured the travel-worn athletes on.

Snead, bringing his game to a peak, teamed with Wilfred Wehrle to win the National Pro-Am at St. Augustine yesterday with a score of 12 under par for the 31 holes the finals lasted.

Last year Swinging Sammy beat out Carolina-bred Clayton Heafner, of Charlotte, in the North and South with a 277, even though Heafner shot four straight subpar 70's.

After the North and South the touring pros will go to Greensboro (March 27-29) and Asheville (April 2-5) for two more 72-hole tournaments before heading for the grand finale at Augusta.

Flaherty Returns to Handle Minor Redskin Matters

Pro Coach to Attend League Meeting In N. Y. Thursday

Washington Redskin Coach Ray Flaherty, in shape for 60 minutes against the Bears if needed after two months of hunting and fishing near his home in Spokane, Wash., arrived here yesterday to attend to off-season matters.

The redhead and the Redskin management will leave today for New York and the National Pro League meeting Thursday through Saturday.

Flaherty will return after the meeting and work out at the Redskin office for six weeks or more, lining up a training site, working on contracts, new players, etc.

Flaherty has been completely divorced from the grid game since the winter meeting and playoffs in Chicago. The only Redskin player he has seen has been Jim Barber, now a chief petty officer in the Navy. Barber will report to Norfolk April 8.

Carrier Bonds Up $10 to $20 In Buying Rush

By the Associated Press

New York, March 23.—While the stock market idled today through one of the slowest sessions in recent years, the bond market in the stock exchange swung into unusual activity on a buying rush in railroad loans.

Total bond transactions of $17,099,000 face value were the largest since early April. Many of the rail bonds at the close showed price gains ranging from $10 to more than $30 per $1000 bond.

Bond dealers said the big demand for the fixed income rail securities was an indication many investors were buying them in preference to stocks in the belief dividends on stocks might be due for general slashing under the proposed new tax schedules. There is no corresponding hazard for bond interest since corporations may deduct this before figuring profits subject to taxation.

Rail Revenues are Spur

Rail bonds, almost alone in the securities realm, have been rising in the market in recent months, partly as a result of a steady increase in carrier revenues during the last year. Buying has embraced many low priced issues, including some that have been in default on interest payments for several years.

Contributing heavily to the total dealings of $17,099,000, face value, against Friday's $10,660,600, were such bonds as Rock Island refunding 4s, Denver & Rio Grande Western 5s, Frisco 4½s of '78, and Missouri Pacific "F" 5s of '77. In these the transactions ranged from around $360,000 to more than $600,000, par value. All closed fractionally higher.

Many Gain 1 to 3

Gains running from 1 to around 3 points were registered by Central New England 4s, which closed at 73¾, Illinois Central 4s at 53¼, Mohawk & Malone 4s at 53½, Wisconsin Central 4s of '49 at 49¾, Pere Marquette 5s at 73¾ and Lehigh Valley 4s at 34⅝.

Price changes in industrial and utility liens were small on average.

International Telephone 5s moved up briskly on rumors the Federal Government might arrange for transfer of control of some communications facilities in Latin-America. The company has properties in that area.

Late Earnings Statements

Union Carbide & Carbon Corporation for the year 1941 reported net income of $42,041,625 after taxes and charges, equal to $4.53 a common share. This compared wiht net income of $42,247,274, or $4.55 a common share, in 1940. The company said income before taxes and other deductions in 1041 was $106,759,420, compared with $83,071,101 in the preceding year.

American Smelting & Refining Co. reportedthat 1941 net income amounted to $15,742,662, equal after divident requirements to $5.59 a share on the common stock. In 1940 the company earned $12,735,204, or $4.21 a share.

American Commercial Alcohol Corporation and its wholly owned subsidiary, American Distilling Co., of Maryland, reported 1941 net income of $1,052,121 after charges and taxes, equal to $4.03 a share on common stock, compared with 1940 net income of $57,847, or 22 cents a share.

Hawaiian Agricultural Company reports $273,848 net profit for 1941, compared with $254,612 in 1940. Net per share on the 125,000 capital shares rose to $2.19 from $2.04.

Cotton Mills Race Production to Provide Substitutes for Wool, Silk and Nylon

The Nation's cotton textile industry was racing along this week to provide Uncle Sam with war essentials and, at the same time, to keep cotton shirts on the backs of the country's civilian population.

Wainwright's men in the fox holes of Bataan feed shells into their machine guns on cotton ammunition belts.

The rapidly expanding United States Army which is pointing towards a crest of 10,000,000 men may swell faster than barracks can be built for housing and cotton duck makers are spinning out unending yards of canvas for thousands of tents.

Meantime, with the armed forces earmarking growing amounts of wool, and silk and nylon practically extinct for everyday consumer uses, the cotton textile makers are pressing every facility to replace these cloth ingredients in the civilian apparel field.

Spindles in operation in the domestic cotton textile industry last month numbered 23,077,722, and they were operated at an averega of 135.9 per cent of two-shift 80-hour capacity.

The industry aims to spin 12,500,000,000 yards of cotton cloth this year, compared with between 11,700,000,000 and 11,800,000,000 last year.

War production officials have notified the cotton textile industry that over the next few months months around 50 per cent of their output will be required for war purposes.

The February rate of mill operations was a shade under the 136.9 per cent of two-shift capacity in the preceding month, but the dip, officials said, was caused principally by changeovers of facilities from civilian to war production. The 23,077,352 spindles in operation in January were about the same as last month.

A year ago there were 22,769,360 spindles opertaing at 115.4 per cent of two-shift capacity in the industry. The increase of more than 300,000 in active producing units during the past year was accomplished by bringing marginal spindles into operation.

Altogether there are 24,045,202 spindles in place in the domestic industry, but manufacturers say those not active are obsolete units hardly worth tinkering with.

An idea of how increased efficiency and longer running time of spindles is pepping up production today may be gained from a look backward. In 1922 the average spindle processed 88 pounds of cotton. Last year the average spindle processed 229 pounds.

The United States Army only last week went into the market for an additional four million yards of cotton cloth.

The Government today is taking every yard of canvas produced in the country.

Big orders are coming into cotton mills for cloth for bags for wrapping farm commodities. Tarditionally, burlap bags are used for agricultural produce.

Government agencies are in the market for cotton cloth for sand bags—two millions yards of sand bag cloth were being sought recently.

Raw cotton supplies are reported adequate for a long time to come, even though the textile industry alone may consume a record eleven million bales this year. Such a consumption would contrast with between 10,200,000 and 10,300,000 bales last year and a normal domestic use of six million to seven million bales annually.

Textile mills still are rolling out civilian cloths but war orders are getting the green light. One reason: The soldier in the field wears out clothing 7 to 11 times faster than the civilian.

Banks' Loans Up 76 Million During Week

By the Associated Press

One of the biggest rises in business loans of banks occurred in the last week, the Federal Reserve Board said yesterday.

The board reported that in the seven days ended March 18, commercial, industrial and agriculture loans of banks in 101 leading cities jumped 76 million dollars to a total of $7,035,000,000. these loans have been increasing fairly steadily for the last year and one half, but seldom gained that much in one week.

Increases included 30 million dollars in New York City, 16 million dollars in the San Francisco Federal Reserve district, 12 million dollars in the Chicago district, 10 million dollars in the Boston district and smaller amounts elsewhere.

The board's 101-city member bank condition statement gave the following summary of assets and liabilities on March 18, together with the increase or decrease since the previous week and the corresponding week last year (in millions of dollars):

Gannett Co. Net Dips to $1,190,798

Rochester, N. Y., March 23 (AP).—Gannett Co., Incorporated, operating 20 newspapers and seven radio stations, reported today net 1941 profit of $1,190,798 compared with $1,235,019 the preceding year.

The figure was 3.1 times dividend requirements on the $6 convertible preferred stock against 2.8 times similar 1940 requirements. During 1941 the company retired 15,742 shares of $6 cumulative preferred stock.

Sears' Sales At Peak; Nets $6.35 a Share

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 23.—Sears, Roebuck & Co., mail order and retail merchandise firm, today reported net income of $36,711,504, equal to $6.35 a share, in the 12 months ended January 31, 1942.

This compared with net income of $36,086,668, equal to $6.32 a share, in the preceding fiscal year.

Sales in the 12 months ended January 31 reached an all-time peak of $915,057,628 against $704,301,014 in the preceding 12 months. Operating income rose to $98,658,759 from $60,714,286.

T. J. Carney, president, told stockholders that mail-order sales reached an all-time high, "indicating that mail-order selling is not on the wane."

Hawaii Store Does Well

A store was opened in Honolulu during the year, Carney said, and has been doing an "exceedingly satisfactory" business since the Pearl Harbor attack.

Carney revealed that 2699 Sears' employes have been drafted or have enlisted in the military services. He said that between 100 and 150 employes are being inducted into the armed forces every week.

"In view of increased inventories and higher costs, and of the unpredictable future," Carney said, "it has been considered prudent to establish the earned surplus at 100 million dollars and to add the excess income over this amount to reserve for contingencies. Consequently, $6,777,279 of this year's income . . . has been added to the reserve."

Less Merchandise Seen

Carney said that "the shortage of critical materials and the demands of the Government upon manufacturers are beginning to cause important changes in the merchandise we offer our customers . . . Sears, along with others, will have less goods to sell during the war."

Current assets at January 31, 1942, totaled $255,455,106, including $45,213,743 in cash and $175,258,396 in inventories. Current liabilities amounted to $71,624,819.

24,016 to Receive Final Dividend in Closed D. C. Bank

A final distribution of $830,100 to 24,016 depositors and creditors of the closed Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co. of Washington will start this week, accordingto Receiver Harry J. Hall.

The first batch of postcards notifying claimants when to pick up their checks will be mailed Wednesday, Mr. Hall said, and every depositor will have been notified by April 4. Claimants are requested not to call at the receiver's offices, 2000 Fourteenth Street Northwest, until formally notified by mail.

Final and fourth dividend, which amounts to 9.9 per cent of proved claims, brings to 84.9 per cent the total amount distributed since liquidation of the bank began.

The receiver's office will be open from 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. daily except Sunday. All checks not called for before May 16 will be turned over to the Comptroller of the Currency, Mr. Hall said.

88,532-Share Block Of Airline Offered

New York, March 23 (AP).—The investment firms of Hornblower & Weeks and Lehman Brothers offered publicly today 88,532 shares of Pan American Airways Corporation capital stock at a fixed price of $14.25 a share net until 10 a. m. March 24.

After that time any remaining shares would be offered at $14.25 a share plus an amount equivalent to New York Stock Exchange commission.

Reports in financial circles said the shares were from the holdings of Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, chairman of Pan American, who recently was commissioned a major in the Air Corps.

Labor-Management Pact for Steel Firm

Wheeling, W. Va., March 23 (AP).—The Wheeling Steel Corporation and the Steel Workers Organizing Committee (C. I. O.) have agreed to establish joint labor and management committees to speed up production for the war effort.

Stocks Creep Higher in Sluggish Trade; Tax and Labor Doubts Continue as Handicap

New York, March 23.—The stock market developed moderate rising tendencies today as disturbing news, for the most part, was lacking. The direction was slightly upward at the start but dealings were sluggish and top gains of fractions to 2 points were reduced at the close.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks finished with a net advance of .2 of a point at 34.9. Transfers totalled 281,410 and compared with 276,870 Friday.

War bulletins generally remained indecisive but a little buying cropped up, brokers said, on individual situations and the belief the list was in a position to respond to any real bullish turn in international affairs. Tax and labor doubts continued to handicap sentiment to some extent.

A lot of good earnings statements, notably those of General Motors and American Commercial Alcohol, were a bolstering influence. Steels were able to show only small plus signs despite an estimated jump in this week's mill operations to a new high for actual ingot production.

Action of the House Ways and Means Committee in ordering concrete proposals drawn up for a Federal sales tax cheered Wall Street which favors this method of collecting revenues on the idea some relief might be given corporations.

International Telephone stocks and bonds went into new high ground for the year on reports the Federal Administration was considering the financing of purchases of communications companies in Latin-America either through the governments involved or private concerns such as I. T. & T.

Ending with modest advances were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Santa Fe, American Commercial Alcohol, Western Union, Homestake, Montgomery Ward, United Aircraft, American Can, Dow Chemical, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical and U. S. Gypsum.

A shade in arrears were N. Y. Central, Chesapeake & Ohio, Philip Morris, Du Pont and Great Northern.

Secondary carrier loans moved forward in an exceptionally active bond division. Commodities were mixed. At Chicago soybeans fell about 5 cents a bushel but cut the decline to 3½ to 3⅝. Wheat was off 1 to 1¾, corn down ¼ to ⅜ and hogs up 10 to 15 cents. Cotton was 20 to 35 cents a bale advanced.

Improved in the Curb were American Cyanamid, Gulf Oil, Pennroad and International Petroleum. Draper Corporation dropped 4¼ on a meager volume. The aggregate here was a ound 50,000 shares versus 76,000 in the previous full session.

United Air Lines' Net Declines to $598,050 in Year

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 23.—United Air Lines Transport Corporation today reported 1941 net income of $598,050, equivalent to 40 cents a capital share. In 1940 the company had net income of $775,463, which included a nonrecurring credit of $255,235.

Total revenues increased 19.7 per cent to $19,362,100 in 1941 as compared with 1940 while operating expenses and taxes advanced 19.4 per cent to $18,753,200.

Passenger traffic accounted for 70 per cent of operating revenue, W. A. Patterson, president, told stockholders.

Western Net Also Drops

San Francisco, March 23 (AP).—Western Air Lines, Inc., reports $5,980 net profit for 1941 or about 1 cent a share. The 1940 net profit was $139,585 or 34 cents a share.

Union Electric Asks Bids on Bond Issue

New York, March 23 (AP).—The Union Electric Co. of Missouri advertised for bids today on ten million dollars of 3⅜ per cent first mortgage bonds, due in 1971.

The funds will be used in part payment for a 33-million-dollar expansion program undertaken because of war requirements for power. The bonds will finance construction at the company's No. 2 plant at Venice, Ill., across the river from St. Louis, Mo.

Executive Job Too Confining, Says Bendix

By the Associated Press

New York, March 23.—Vincent Bendix, announcing in a prepared statement today his resignation from all official connection with the Bendix Aviation Corporation, said he would hereafter devote himself to the "field of development."

The 61-year-old inventor and industrialist disclosed Saturday he had resigned as chairman of the corporation's board but at that time refused to discuss it further except to say his departure "was very friendly."

His statement today was followed by one from Ernest R. Breech, the corporation president, who said Bendix's resignation had been accepted with "deep regrets."

Breech, a former vice president of General Motors, one of the largest stockholders in the Bendix corporation, succeeded Bendix as president of the latter organization last February 24, when the inventor was made board chairman.

Bendix's statement on his withdrawal from the corporation, which is one of the leading manufacturers and instruments and an important of aviation and automotive parts supplier of war materials, said.

"I have had a very full and active career in industry. My early years were devoted to the development and world-wide acceptance of some mechanical devices with which my name is synonymous.

"The past few years have confined me to executive duties. I am leaving the largest organization of its kind, which will do a business of one billion dollars in 1943, wtih a certain pride of accomplishment and with full confidence that it will continue to grow under the present capable management.

"I am now free to devote my time to the field of development unrestrained by executive demands."

Visible Grain Supply

New York, March 23 (AP).—Visible supply of American grain showed the following changes from a week ago (in bushels): Wheat decreased 1,140,000; corn increased 403,000; oats decreased 336,000; rye decreased 171,000; barley increased 31,000.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 23 (AP).—Another outburst of selling in the grain market, similar to that which weakened prices last week, caused a new sinking spell today, and most quotations reached virtually the lowest general level of the year before there was a rally.

Bond buyers were weakest, tumbling more than 5 cents at one stage to lows unequaled here since mid-January. This helped to upset values in other pits and wheat and rye fell almost 3 cents, wheat selling the lowest since early December, and rye since early in January.

In the absence of trade developments upon which the liquidation could be blamed, brokers attributed the reaction to a continuation of spring liquidation due to a combination of factors. These included lagging demand from consuming interests, except in the case of feeding grains, likelihood of a scarcity of storage space when 1942 harvests begin, favorable winter wheat prospects, postponement of consideration of legislation to restrict Government grain sales and possibility of increased spring military activity. The Government report on spring planting intentions, to be released tomorrow, was expected to be bearish.

After the stop loss selling subsided the market rallied on short covering, but wheat closed 1-1¼ cents lower than Saturday: May, 1.25¼@1.25½; July, 1.27¼@1.27½. Corn was ¼-⅝ off: May, 87¼@87⅞; July, 89½. Oats, ½-⅝ down. Rye, ¾-1 lower; May, 77¾. Soy beans, 3¼-3⅝ down: May, 1.87⅝. Lard unchanged at ceilings.

Sugar Imports Declared Cut 50% in Year

By the Associated Press

Ellsworth Bunker, chairman of the War Production Board's cane sugar refiners' advisory committee, testified yesterday that shipping difficulties had caused a 50 per cent drop in sugar imports so far this year, and added, "My impression is that the situtaion is not going to get better immediately."

Appearing before the House small business committee, he said the sugar problem which necessitated rationing was one of transportation, not of supply.

Bunker, president of the National Sugar Refining Co. of New York, said the War Production Board was seeking some remedy.

For example, he said alternate means of shipment from Cuba and Puerto Rico were being developed. This would mean shipment by boat to some Southern port, say one in Florida or Mobile, Ala., and then rail shipment to that part of the East Coast in greatest need, he said. The first cargo under this system, he added, is expected in Florida late this month.

He said the inland waterway north from Miami might be used for sugar transportation.

Bunker said the WPB was undertaking to move some beet sugar to the East and was considering a zoning order to restrict the markets into which refiners may ship sugar.

He estimated that present prices would lead Cuba to increase its production by 500,000 tons and that Florida and Louisiana would step up their output by 200,000 to 300,000 tons.

Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, urged that the committee take steps to provide additional processing plants so that the West might increase its beet sugar production. He said beet areas were prepared to increase by 500,000 tons, but investors in new processing plants must be given assurance that their operation could continue after the war.

Boston Sugar Refinery Suspends Operations

Boston, March 23 (AP).—One large Boston sugar refinery was shut down today because of transportation difficulties which had deprived it of raw material and another reported it could not hope to meet demands unless remedial measures were found.

A spokesman for one of the refineries said that if a shortage resulted it would be due to inability to transport raw sugar, which was piling up in Cuba and Puerto Rico.

"There is no serious shortage now of refined sugar," commented Massachusetts Rationing Commissioner Henry Parkman, jr., "and barring unforeseen difficulties, I am confident that supplies will continue to be available until rationing goes into effect. Wherever shortages exist it is a temporary and a local situation."

Large retail distributors said that they saw no occasion for public alarm and expressed confidence that "anticipated cargoes" of raw sugar would relieve any shortage.

Business Failures Drop 14% in Week

New York, March 23 (AP).—Dun & Bradstreet today reported business failures in the United States had declined 14 per cent in the week ending March 19, for a total of 193 as compared with 224 in the preceding week and 255 a year ago.

The total number of commercial and industrial failures so far this year was 2537 against 3070 in the same period of 1941.

Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corporation reported 1941 net income of $5,002,709, equal after preferred dividend requirements to $3.86 a share of common stock outstanding, compared with 1940 earning of $3,722,107, or $2.78 a share.

Financial Advertising of Educational Nature Urged as Means of Preserving News Service

By Elmer C. Walzer
United Press Financial Editor
(Condensed and reprinted from the New York Stock Exchange Magazine)

An important contribution the exchanges could make would be the cooperation with leading corporations to induce the latter to purchase more advertising space of an educational nature in the daily press. This advertising would do two important things in addition to giving material aid to the corporations. In the first place, it would acquaint the reader of the stock market pages with the elements of the various businesses. Secondly, it would tend to keep the financial pages intact.

Just now, the financial page is disappearing from the papers of America. This great loss is being caused by absence of advertising. When the financial pages are gone, the stock markets will have no place where their quotations will be carried and no place where news of their operations will be available to a public they must have in order to function properly.

Without spending beyond their means, corporations could distribute sufficient advertising throughout the country to maintain these pages now so rapidly disappearing. This service now would pay big dividends later on when other forms of advertising might take their place—advertisements of new issues to finance the new boom in business.

Financial pages have been curtailed from coast to coast because newspapers could not afford to continue them intact without benefit of advertising. A financial section is one of the most expensive in a paper. Tabular matter is costly to set up. Just now, paper is growing more and more costly, and the publishers cannot see their way clear to maintain departments which do not pay for themselves.

The curtailment has been going on for several years. For a time it seemed to be running its course. Now it has started again. Only a short time ago a Middle Western newspaper eliminated all daily market tables. It now prints only weekly tables. Many other papers have reduced the number of lists carried. Others have reduced the number of quotations carried for the various markets. Some have reduced the number of editions printed. Nearly all have sharply reduced the space devoted to the entire field of financial news.

The process of tearing down such an institution as a financial page ordinarily is a slow one. But the rebuilding of a financial section is even slower. Hence, the need of retaining as many of these pages as possible in all sections of the country. They will keep the public informed of the day-to-day trend of the market. They will be the medium through which the corporations can tell their story of progress. They will be the record of the market's rise and fall. They will herald the new rise that should come when industry gets into full peacetime production.

If the exchanges and the corporations do their part to maintain these pages through legitimate advertising, the newspapers will make the pages more attractive, add new features, print more corporation and market news. All this would educate the public more and more on the functions of the stock market, and make the problems of the exchanges lighter when the time comes to police a boom.

Editors, of course, will give space in their news columns to wide market breaks or sharp advances, accompanied by volume. They also will print outstanding items on corporations. But once the financial page is gone, the ordinary corporation report will not be printed unless it is handled as a paid advertisement. And then it

Cigarette Sales 20% Ahead of 1941, OPA Reports

Cigarette sales now are about 20 per cent higher than the 1941 average and are continuing to rise, the Office of Price Administration reported last night in a statement presenting its reasons for a recent decision against increasing the manufacturers' price of cigarettes, which would have been followed by a retail boost.

Along with the report on costs and profits of the industry, OPA announced an amendment of the cigarette price order which would permit an increase if the Federal cigarette tax were to be raised.

BIDS & PROPOSALS 6

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE, UNITED States Patent Office, Washington, D. C., March 23, 1942.—Sealed proposals (in triplicate) will be received at this office until 10 a. m., Saturday, April 4, 1942, and will be opened immediately thereafter, in the presence of such bidders as attend, for producing in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1943, copies of drawings of pending applications and patents, trade-mark applications, and of foreign patents, papers, and exhibits by photographic or other process. The prices named will be considered in connection with the ability of the bidder and his plant to do and deliver within a specified time first-class work, and, prior to the determination of an award, such preliminary investigation as to the qualifications of bidders and efficiency of plant will be made as the Department shall deem necessary. A low bid, unsupported by satisfactory evidence as to ability to perform the work in agreement with the terms of the proposals and contracts to be awarded, will be rejected. All bids accepted and contracts awarded subject to an appropriation by Congress to meet the expense. Lack of commercial standing on the part of the bidder or inadequate facilities or plant with which to perform the work specified will constitute good and sufficient ground for the rejection of such a bid. BIDDERS WHOSE WORK HAS BEEN UNSATISFACTORY IN THE PAST MAY BE ELIMINATED FROM CONSIDERATION ON THAT GROUND. Specifications and specimens, with forms of proposal, will be furnished on application to the Chief Clerk of the Patent Office. All bidders are invited to be present at the opening. The right to reject any and all bids, in whole or in part, is hereby reserved. All plates used in color work or halftone work to be the property of the Patent Office. The number of colors used in the color work to be in accordance with the drawings as furnished. All work of current issue (Class A) to be performed in the District of Columbia.

THE top surface of these Pennsylvania iron mines has been worked many years ago. In those days manganese was a curse, not a blessing. These deposits of ore all show traces of that much-sought-for metal. Some surfaces are runs high in manganese content. Tract of three hundred (300) acres for sale, $20,000 cash, by trustees of liquidating mortgage association. We can refer you to maps of this rich mineral deposit; will allow you to have ore analyzed. Terms are $5,000 cash for option; $15,000 balance on confirmation of deed. Write, Building and Loan Trustees, 405 Commerce Building, Altoona, Pa.

Grin and Bear It

By Lichty

"Wilbur, if you don't know the answers to Junior's questions why don't you say so—instead of telling him it's a military secret!"

ADVERTISEMENT

Listen!
with Glynn

Mr. and Mrs. America are enthusiastically behind Uncle Sam in his battle to whip the Axis—but how can they help?

That's the tenor of thousands of letters which have come pouring across the desk of Brewster Morgan, director of C. B. S. "Report to the Nation,"—WJSV at 9:30 p. m.—since Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor actively embroiled the United States in World War II.

"I am strong, look and feel not over 60, but am 70 according to my birth certificate," writes an Edwardsville, Kans., former machinist. He adds, "I am raring to go. All I want is a chance to show what I can do."

A 60-year-old Wichita, Kans., oil man, with a son in the Army, wants to come out of retirement, and do defense work "so I can release a young man to the armed forces." And a middle-aged Brooklyn, N. Y., couple, whose only son is flying with the Air Corps, want "any work. My wife can sew."

Many of the letters, especially those which followed the two recent "Reports" on the man and womanpower shortage resulting from vastly increased war production, come from farmers, former machinists, former construction workers who want to put their shoulders to the wheel and help turn out the bullets, tanks, airplanes and guns which will crush Hitler, Mussolini and Hirohito.

From all over the Nation they write. But they all sing the same refrain: "We want to help!"

Contract Bridge

Today's hand, played by a guest at one of the monthly duplicate tournaments held by the Barnard College Club, was a bit of a worry to one declarer, who played the hand at six no trump. He was Pye Chamberlayne, who, with his wife, Mrs. Chamberlayne, had reached the rather optimistic small slam through the Blackwood convention. Chamberlayne saw at once that he was short a trick and refused to win the opening trick, so that he could gain the timing necessary to execute a squeeze.

Today's Hand

Both Sides Vulnerable
SOUTH DEALER

	♠ A K Q 6 4 ♡ A Q 8 ◇ 5 3 ♣ K 10 3
♠ 8 2 ♡ 9 6 3 ◇ K Q J 7 ♣ Q J 9 2	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ 10 9 ♡ 10 5 4 2 ◇ 9 8 6 2 ♣ 7 5 4
	♠ J 7 5 3 ♡ K J 7 ◇ A 10 4 ♣ A 8 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 ♡	Pass	5 NT	Pass
6 ◇	Pass	6 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ◇.

With five spades, three hearts, two clubs and a diamond certain, declarer realized that if West held the queen, jack of club as well as the diamond honors indicated by his opening lead, a squeeze could be developed through the threat cards of the club ten and the diamond ten. Therefore, he followed with a low diamond to West's lead of the king, giving up at once the only trick he hoped to lose, in order to be able to exert pressure.

The diamond queen was continued and declarer won with the ace; he ran his five spades and three hearts, ending in his hand with the king. On the heart lead West was squeezed and had to discard either the high diamond or the guard to the club honors. With a club discard declarer would take the ace, king, then of clubs for the last three tricks; with the diamond discard, Chamberlayne would win two clubs and the ten of diamonds. West conceded defeat and South scored six no trump with the loss of one diamond trick.

Bilbo Offers General Draft Bill in Senate

Congressional proposals for general conscription were revived yesterday with introduction of legislation to authorize President Roosevelt to assign all American citizens, men or women, to essential war duties.

The bill was introduced by Senator Theodore G. Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi. It would require registration of all men and women 18 years of age or older. The President would be empowered to assign registrants not eligible for military service to work in Government-owned or private plants and home defense tasks and fix their rate of pay.

The measure, offered as anamendment to the Selective Service Act, also would authorize the Government to requisition property deemed vital to the war program.

It is similar to a bill introduced recently by Representative J. Percy Priest (Democrat) of Tennessee, who failed to press for action after many members agreed it was "premature." Bilbo did not indicate whether he would seek immediate consideration.

Bilbo told the Senate his bill would "put practically all of the labor racketeers in the front lines" and 'sound the death knell for a luxury-softened era of playboys and glamour girls."

He said that production lost "for various and inexcusable reasons" in the aviation industry had cost the country 3000 planes in the last 3½ months; warned against any ill-advised "crack-down" on labor, and contended there were five million unemployed persons who could be put in war industries if their skills were known.

Prince Georges Seeks Fire Alarm, Raid Dispatchers

J. Robert Sherwood, chairman of the Prince George County (Md.) defense council, yesterday announced applications would be accepted for fire alarm and air-raid dispatchers to man a central control station in the county service building at Hyattsville, beginning May 1.

Sherwood said three men would be employed on a full-time basis at $1440 a year and a substitute at a salary of $680 a year. When the control center is put into operation, all fires will be reported there instead of to the local companies. The calls will then be relayed to the company closest to the blaze.

Argentina Recalls Purchasing Board Here

By the Associated Press

Buenos Aires, March 23.—A high government source said tonight that the chiefs of the Argentine Military Purchasing Commission in Washington were returning home "because the necessities of war prevent the United States from delivering at this time arms required by the belligerents."

This source said Brig. Gen. Eduardo Lapez and Rear Admiral Saba Sueyro were coming home because "the mission was concluded," but indication was that they failed to obtain ships, arms and other materiel.

This informant emphasized that the North American position was not based on a question of priorities favoring certain countries over others, but strictly on the grounds that materials were lacking to send to nations which are not actually involved in warfare.

The only war materials which have arrived in Argentina since the government began strengthening its military came from Germany.

A reliable informant said the Spanish ship, Cabo do Hornos, recently brought a considerable amount of machinery for a gunpowder factory now being built in Rio Cuarto, Cordoba Province, as well as equipment for some existing munitions plants

The shipment included a major part of purchases completed in Germany and Denmark before the outbreak of war, this informant said. The negotiations began in 1938, but the arrival of the equipment for the factory—planned with the advice of now departed German technicians—was delayed by the war.

The remainder of the materials are expected to reach Argentina soon via Cadiz, Spain.

Argentina's regular military attaches in Washington will represent the nation at the coming inter-American defense talks there, a government source said. Their function will be merely to obtain information for transit here.

One of the principal themes to be considered at the Washington meeting, an outgrowth of the Pan American conference at Rio de Janeiro, will be the question of establishing a convoy system to protect inter-American commerce.

It was recalled that the Argentine delegation at Rio de Janeiro was instructed to oppose formation of a joint convoy system, and informed sources said this position was unchanged, despite the fact that several South American nations have lost ships to Axis submarines.

1918 War Comedy Will Aid A. R. E.

The World War I all-soldier musical comedy, "Yip, Yip Yaphank," produced by Irving Berlin, will be revived under title of "This Is the Army" and will open on Broadway in May for benefit of the Army Emergency Relief, quasi-official agency caring for soldiers and their dependents.

The 1942 version, the War Department said yesterday, will have an all-soldier cast. Berlin will wear his World War I uniform and sing "Oh How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning"— a hit tune he sang in the 1918 version. Berlin wrote the 1918 version when he was a sergeant at Camp Upton, Long Island.

Bondholders Bid In K. C. Journal

Kansas City, March 23 (AP).—The Kansas City Journal, sold today under foreclosure, was bid in for bondholders by Morton W. Rosen, of Baltimore, for $250,000. The foreclosure sale was called by holders of $500,000 in bonds issued in 1931.

Recently an involuntary proceeding was filed against the newspaper by the International Paper Sales Co., for a $216,000 news-print bill. At that time, Harry Newman, president of the company, said his records showed that the bill had been paid.
